BABY FILMS TO BE SHOWN IN THE LOCAL THEATRES IT IS DECIDED, AS FEATURE

Five New Six Months' Subscriptions Entitles Parents to Movie Film of Little Contestant, Irrespective of the Competition

SCENE OF FILM TAKING TO BE ANNOUNCED

Photographers Warn Parents to Make Arrangements for Sittings Now to Avoid Rush, Delay and Disappointment of Hurrying

The babies are waking up to the chances they are likely to lose and applications are flowing in steadily for the best baby contest. When parents realize that five new six months' subscriptions are all that is necessary to secure a motion picture of their darling, the Press expects a great many of them to get busy and shove the orders in rapidly. Arrangements will be made to show the films at the theatres. There should be no misunderstanding about it. One subscription for 30 months will not be accepted. The application must be accompanied by five new bona fide subscriptions for six months each.

Others who have no children are becoming interested and are asking where the motion picture films can be seen after they are taken. That is a detail yet to be arranged, but negotiations are in progress.

Local photographers are reparting that parents must enter their babies and engage sittings without delay or they will not be able to obtain them before the contest closes September 30, so PARENTS TAKE NOTICE.

Also, proofs should be returned without delay so that the mounted pictures can be printed and prints for the cuts made.

One of the latest babies to be entered is little Lydia Carman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. Carman of 363 Salem street. Lydia is a round-faced, blue eyed, fair haired little girl who is full of life and initiative. She is said to be very fond of music. Her parents came to Glendale about six months ago from Long Island where they were used to cool sea breezes in summer. They like California very much in spite of heat greater than they have been accustomed to.

GLENDALE PACE ACCELERATES PERMITS

$509,150 Total for Month So Far, Means Six Million This Year

Maybe the fellow who said that Glendale is "going back" was right after all. Possibly he really did see the handwriting on the wall. But he could not read it. For instance, take the building permits of Thursday. These amounted to $67,150 for the whole day. From this it is very evident that Glendale is going somewhere. For the months, thus far, the permits total $509,370. There are at least two or three cities in the United States in which a greater amount in permits have been issued thus far during September. Both Los Angeles and New York are ahead of Glendale for permits issued during the month. But—you know how it is. They have not all heard about Glendale.

Then too, for the year Glendale's building permits total only $4,616,871—a mere trifle. This would seem to show that the many who predicted a set-back for this city during 1922 had hit the nail on the head. According to the rate the building permits are being taken out here they will not run over six or seven million dollars for the year.

It certainly is sad how Glendale is falling away. This city will make a growth in population of only 8,000 or 10,000 this year, which is hardly worth mentioning. But there is always a silver lining, if a fellow will look hard and long enough. The one in this situation is that possibly, in the far distant future, Glendale may begin to grow again. But even at that there seem to be little doubt but that she will at the close of 1922, still be classed as the "fastest fast, growing city in the United States."

AUTOS CRASH ON GLENDALE STREETS

Several merry accidents occurred Thursday by way of keeping the people of this city from becoming entirely despondent. There was something doing when a Ford sedan, driven by Miss Etta Suplee of 929 Sierra avenue, and a Ford truck belonging to the Nasons Piano Moving company and operated by G. A. Moore, came together. The accident occurred at the corner of Central and Wilson at 10:35 in the morning. Mr. Suplee, who was riding in the sedan at the time, was injured and was taken home by the Glendale police.

Another little seance occurred when automobiles driven by Robert North Bradbury of 804 East Acacia street and W. Helbling of Los Angeles came together on Los Feliz road, the accident taking place at 9 o'clock p. m. Glaring headlights are given as the cause of this melee.

Oliver Enlis, 1271 Thompson, was driving a machine that collided with a car operated by an unknown person, the accident taking place at the corner of Thompson and Tenth streets at 7:30 last night. There was a bending of tin, but no one was injured.

Gertrude Brulin of 330 Hawthorne street and F. D. Stoddard of 600 West Myrtle street, were operating autos that tangled horns on East Broadway at 9 o'clock a. m. No one was hurt.

PICKPOCKET OPERATES.

A picknocket stole the pocketbook of Miss Lila B Moore of 320 West Broadway, while she was on the Pacific Electric car bound for Glendale Thursday afternoon. Miss Moore did not discover that the article was missing until she started to leave the car. The matter was reported to the Glendale police, but thus far nothing has been heard of the missing pocketbook.

Chief of Police Fraser, He Catchum Dog Catcher

Chief of Police Fraser is up against it. He needs someone to catch dogs and up to noon today this position had not been filled. The applicant does not need to possess any particular qualifications. Man with Ford car preferred.

Stand in line, folks, don't crowd.

C. OF C. BACKS ELECTRIC LINE TAG DAY

Appoints Committee to Handle Festivities of the Occasion

Dr. Jessie A. Russell has been appointed by the Glendale Chamber of Commerce as chairman of the committee which will have complete charge of tag day. This tag day will be held in an effort to furnish a material boost to the campaign that is being conducted to provide funds for the electrification of the steam line on Glendale avenue.

The committee for tag day consists of the presidents of the various women's organizations of Glendale. A meeting of this committee has been called for 2:30 o'clock Monday afternoon at the chamber of commerce. At this meeting plans for tag day will be perfected.

The following letter has been sent to the committee members by President Hollister, of the chamber of commerce:

"The electrification of the Glendale avenue line is the most important question before the citizens of Glendale today. Transportation is the dominant factor in a city's progress, and every citizen in Glendale should be directly interested in securing adequate facilities.

"The board of directors of the chamber of commerce has proposed a tag day to assist in raising funds for the promotion of the railway, and has appointed a committee of women, presidents of organizations, to outline plans.

"You are invited to become a member of this committee, and we hope you will accept. In case you are unable to do so, please appoint your representative.

"Dr. Jessie A. Russell, chairman of our civics committee, and president of the Federated Improvement associations, has been appointed chairman of the committee.

"A committee meeting is called for Monday, September 25, at 2:30 p. m. sharp, at the chamber of commerce building. You are urged to be present."

It is understood that on the coming tag day a number of surprise features will be introduced. A suggestion is made to all of the proprietors of business houses in Glendale that each owner purchase a tag for each of his employees, and also for himself. This proceedure would not cripple any business man and would doubtless assist greatly in the campaign. The exact date for the campaign has not been set, but just as soon as it has been decided on the readers of the Glendale Press will be informed.

Every loyal Glendalite will have two bits ready with which to purchase a tag, when called upon. If you don't get a tag you will be an outsider.

ROTARY PROGRAM SURPRISES THE MEMBERS

Bagpipe and Scotch Songs Mark Entertainment of Thursday

A surprise program was sprung on the members of the Glendale Rotary club at its weekly luncheon Thursday at the chamber of commerce auditorium. Groupe 1, of which "Bill" Tanner is chairman, had charge of the program.

After a short business meeting the program, which consisted entirely of Scotch selections, started. One of the leading features was the songs and monologue by Geo. T. Vallance, who in addition to having been the leading tenor of Canada, is a native of Scotland and is a brother of Sir Harry Lauder. His selections were altogether too short as they were greatly enjoyed by all of his hearers.

Harry T. Fraser, also a native of Scotland, who is on the Glendale postal force, and is a resident of Tujunga, gave several numbers on the bagpipe and also accompanied the dancers.

Miss Wood, a young miss who is a native of Glendale, danced the Highland Fling, accompanied on the bagpipe by "Sandy" McDougall. Both of these young people have hardly reached their "teens," and "Sandy" is the only boy playing the bagpipe in Southern California. He received his instruction from Harry Fraser.

Jacqueline Barton, a 9-year-old miss, who has been three years in vaudeville, also danced the Highland Fling, and gave a number of Scotch impersonations. France Henry, although he possessed no kilts, led the community singing of the Scotch group and announced the program, doing both in a very commendable manner.

This was the first "group" program and the opposing groupe will have to "go some," if their offering is to be as interesting as the one presented yesterday.

SHRINE CLUB TO TAKE JOURNEY

Members of the Shrine club of Glendale are in receipt of an invitation to attend the Al Malaikah Gold Tournament, barbecue and sports to be held at Flintridge Country Club of Pasadena, Saturday, September 23. The golf tournament will last all day, the barbecue will be at one o'clock, and the sports events at 2:30. Wives and sweethearts are also invited. As the club cannot arrange to go in a body, they will attend separately.

Gold Platter Offering of Car Line to Glendale

(Reprinted by Request from Glendale Daily Press of December 22, 1921)

By JOHN H. GERRIE
Prosperity Editor Glendale Daily Press

With only about $9000 more to be raised for the bonus to put through the electric line, and subscriptions mounting slowly but surely, the Glendale Daily Press sees in the line to be a realization of its hopes of last December, expressed—urged upon the city—editorially.

The belief in that railroad has never changed. The Glendale Press urges it upon the citizens of Glendale today as it did then.

The editorial of last December is reprinted here below by request.

Not often a public utility is proffered a municipality on a silver platter. Particularly if the utility gives assurance of immediate returns.

The silver platter is held out today to Glendale. And on it is a public carrier, doing business and paying interest on the investment.

John H. Gerrie

But that is only a small part of the contents of the platter. There also is a practically unused railway line upon it. At one end of the unused line is the public carrier referred to and at the other end is the street car system of a great neighboring city.

A 5-cent fare on the carrier over the unused line to the city system! Then another 5-cent fare over that system with transfers to any part of Los Angeles!

Ten cents from the heart of Glendale to any part of Los Angeles! What do you think of it?

Would it make a hit with those who travel constantly between the two cities to work, or to visit? Ask some of them and see!

But its psychological effect! It would make it easier for Angelenos to see and know Glendale. And what do you suppose the Pacific Electric would do with active competition in the field? That competition certainly would be calculated to liven things up for Glendale.

The carrier that might be acquired, of course, is the Glendale & Montrose Railway. The line of little use is that of the Salt Lake Route and the third unit of the big idea is the yellow car line of the Los Angeles Railway.

All three interested concerns will be willing parties to the scheme. The owners of the Montrose street car line are not railway people. Though their line is now said to be paying for the first time they realize that motor competition at any time may take away their profits and there is good reason for believing that they would turn their property and franchise over to the city of Glendale at a rock bottom price.

The Salt Lake Route on its part is harassed by the public demand that it electrify its line along Glendale avenue and carry passengers between Los Angeles and Glendale. But it is not in the street car business, knows nothing of electric transportation and maintains its Glendale avenue line simply to run a few freight cars up and down every morning. There is some sort of legend that this must be done to maintain its franchise. But that franchise apparently dates back to prehistoric ages, and there is no record of it in the Glendale city hall. And that's got the Salt Lake worrying a little bit, too.

So, you can readily understand that the new subsidiary of the Union Pacific is quite willing to enter into an arrangement whereby the city of Glendale will electrify its Glendale avenue line and operate a street car system over it, allowing the Salt Lake to retain the privilege of occasionally shunting its freights up and down the city's thoroughfare.

The project is all the easier because the Montrose line runs into the Salt Lake tracks near Broadway and the latter cross the yellow car line in the Verdugo road, about three miles from Broadway. The city would require to electrify only three miles of line and buy a few more cars to be a full fledged street railway operator. And who can doubt that it would be a money-maker from the start?

From an unofficial source it is suggested that an expenditure of $100,000 would give this city control of the Montrose line, electrify the Salt Lake line to the point where it meets the Los Angeles line and start the tide of travel over the ten-cent route between the two cities. Talk about offerings on silver platters! This looks more like a gold platter!

HIGH FOOTBALL SCHEDULE FOR FALL

First of Series Set for Glendale on October Twentieth

At a meeting of the principals and coaches of the high schools in the Central league, held at the South Pasadena high school Wednesday night, the football schedule for this season was adopted.

Monrovia high scnooi, which is conceded to have one of the strongest teams in the league, will meet Glendale on November 10 at Monrovia.

Glendale fans had hoped that these two teams would meet on Armistice Day at Glendale. Last year the Armistice Day game between the Dynamiters and the orange growers was the most thrilling contest of the football season.

The following schedule adopted by the conference gives Glendale two games to be played on Moyse field.

October 20: Glendale at Covina, South Pasadena at Alhambra and Citrus at Monrovia.

October 27: South Pasadena at Glendale, Monrovia at Covina and Citrus at Alhambra.

November 3: Glendale at Citrus, Covina at South Pasadena and Alhambra at Monrovia.

November 10: Glendale at Monrovia, Covina at Alhambra and South Pasadena at Citrus.

November 17: Alhambra at Glendale, Monrovia at South Pasadena and Covina at Citrus.

Principal Moyse and Coach Hayhurst were present, Coach Hayhurst reports that an important topic of the meeting was the elegibility of the players. Many schools have been forced to forfeit games because of the fact that they played ineligible men.

BEER BONUS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—Representative Brennan, republican of Michigan, today introduced a resolution proposing a constitutional amendment permitting manufacture and sale of 5 percent beer to pay a soldier bonus.

BURGLAR IS FOILED.

Burglars tried to force entrance into the home of Mrs. C. Raybough, 220 South Sycamore Canyon road, Thursday night. Upon noticing the prowlers Mrs. Raybough telephoned the Glendale police. Officer McGuire responded, but when he arrived on the scene the would-be burglars had departed.

MOTORBIKE FOUND.

A motorbike, which is supposed to have been stolen somewhere in this section, was found at the corner of San Fernando and Verdugo road last night. As this intersection is in Los Angeles, the matter was referred to the police department of that city.

Postoffice Refuses Nine Year Old Girl for Parcel Post

Fred B. Walker, superintendent of mails, had an entirely new proposition in the postoffice line put up to him Thursday and turned it down in a hurry, declaring he had troubles enough already.

A Glendale mother brought her 9-year-old daughter whom she wished to send by mail to Duluth, Minn. In justification of her unusual demand she declared that when the child was five years old she had been mailed from Duluth to Washington.

Mr. Walker was unmoved by such precedents and didn't even consult Los Angeles.

It was admitted by Glendale officials that had she succeeded in persuading some easy going, country postmaster to "accept" the "package," the child would have had to be transported.

FORTY GUESTS AT ADVANCEMENT MEETING

Association Hears of Sewer Problems and Salvation Army

About forty guests gathered Thursday noon around the long tables at the Broadway Inn which were gay with red dahlias, when the Glendale Advancement association met.

The guests of the day were introduced by President Ingledue, Mr. Horn of 221 North Louise, who is engaged in the real estate business, Dr. Sherer of 111 East Broadway, who is associated with Dr. Taylor, Mr. Geddes of the Fox-Woodson company, who has been doing yeomen service in soliciting subscriptions for the electrolizing of the Glendale avenue railroad.

Dr. Russell responded to call and gave a brief report of the meeting of the federated improvement associations and the talk made by Mr. Griffin, Los Angeles city engineer, and his assurance that Glendale and other suburban towns would be permitted to "tie in" with the outfall sewer which Los Angeles is planning to build with the proceeds of a bond issue which she expects will be voted in 1924 and which will be available about 1926 or 1927.

"At the present time," said Dr. Russell, "with a population of approximately 34,000, we cannot afford to wait for an outfall sewer but conditions are ripe for the recognition and cooperation of Los Angeles with Glendale and other towns in the matter of securing a 'tie-up' connection with this outfall sewer. The federation went on record unanimously with a recommendation to the city council requesting it to immediately begin negotiations with the city of Los Angeles to secure a tie-up with this proposed sewer. The federation committee will meet with the city council this evening and I am assured that a resolution of intention will immediately be presented of the committee's recommendations.

"The question of annexation will not be raised due to the fact that Culver City has been allowed to 'tie-in' without annexation, thus setting a precedent.

"It raises, however, one other question, our being obliged to provide a temporary disposal plant for Glendale to take care of its sewage, that disposal plant to be disposed of after the 'tie-in' is completed. The details of the temporary disposal plant are yet to be worked out. The first step now is to accept the offer of Los Angeles."

Mr. Ingledue endorsed what Dr. Russell had said relative to the importance of sewers.

Mr. Perch, speaking on behalf of a chamber of commerce committee to cooperate in the Salvation army drive to be put on in this city about the first of October for $5000. On motion of Dr. Russell the chair was instructed to appoint such a committee and Mr. Ingledue named Messrs. Fisher, Todd, Page, Mrs. Mercer and Dr. Stuart.

Speaking for the hotel committee Mrs. Mabel Tight said Mr. Tremaine had reported the papers would soon be out of escrow and everything likely to be finished up today so that work could start immediately. A blueprint architect's elevation of the proposed hotel was on display and was studied with interest after the luncheon was over.

The report which was awaited with the greatest interest and anxiety was that of Mr. Hayselden, chairman of the railroad committee, who spoke with some discouragement. He announced that $16,500 had been pledged and $8000 remained to be raised. While a number of active workers have been secured there are not nearly so many as he should have. He commented on the fact that the returns from some blocks had been as low as $2 to $2.50, which he considered not especially creditable to the canvasser who turned the report in, and these, he said, would have to be recanvassed.

Charles Stanley, chairman of membership, asked and received permission to increase his committee to any extent desired and then announced that every member would be included and expected to bring in another member.

ST. JOHNS, N. F.—Newfoundland's coal fields, it has been estimated, are capable of producing 500,000,000 tons of coal.

GLENDALE LOS ANGELES OUTFALL CONNECTION IS ORDERED TO BE DRAWN

Council Acts on Reports of Federation Improvement Association in Preparation for Developments of 1924 Construction

CONFERENCE OF COUNCILS IS ORDERED

Result of Major Griffin's Visit to Regional Planning Conference and Local Organizations, is Prompt Action on Sewage

At its meeting last night the Glendale city council decided to take immediate action in the matter of endeavoring to secure connection with the outfall sewer that is being constructed by Los Angeles, just as soon as such connection is possible. It was the general opinion of the council that if there is a chance of this city connecting with the Los Angeles outfall sewer, nothing should be left undone that would secure such connection. It was, therefore, decided to enter into communication with the Los Angeles city council with a view of making some mutually satisfactory arrangement whereby the Glendale sewage may be disposed of through the said new Los Angeles outfall sewer. The mayor and the city manager were directed to take the matter up with the proper authorities in Los Angeles.

The action of the board came as a result of a recommendation by the Federal Improvement association of Glendale. The Federation was represented by Dr. Russell their chairman, who in her address said in part:

"I come to you as chairman of the Federated Improvement association of Glendale and as chairman of the civics committee of the chamber of commerce.

"For the past three months our committee has been studying all phases of the sewage proposition. We have studied it from an unbiased angle and have gleaned all the information available on this subject in the United States. We have all worked with a view of solving the sewage question for the city of Glendale. It is the most vital question before the city today. Glendale is known as the city of cesspools. That is a condition that we must get rid of.

"Up to a few days ago our best solution of this problem was a temporary disposal plant, which might be enlarged later. However, the engineers of Los Angeles have been, during the past few weeks, making a trip throughout the entire east for the express purpose of studying the sewage question. they have now come forward with the proposition of building an outfall sewer large enough to take care of Glendale, Eagle Rock, Burbank, Lankershim, Van Nuys and in fact this entire district, in addition to the city of Los Angeles. It is the purpose of the officials of Los Angeles to call an election in 1924 to vote additional bonds, the money derived from the sale of which will be used to extend the outfall sewer to a point within reach of these districts and cities. All of these cities can connect with this outfall sewer, providing they are willing to sand their share of the expense of the main outfall sewer in addition to the connection.

"It will not be necessary for Glendale or any of the othe outlying districts to annex with Los Angeles to receive this service. Culver City was permitted to connect with this sewer without becoming a part of lendale and it is expected that these other districts will be permitted to do likewise.

"But there is another phase to this sewer question that must be considered, and that is "what are we going to do about our sewage until we are permitted to connect with this outfall?' After studying the matter our recommendation is to construct an activated sludge plant, which could be removed just as soon as the connection to the outfall is effected. This outfall will not, we understand, be ready for use until 1927. Glendale cannot be satisfied with cesspools until that time. Something must be done immediately."

At the conclusion of this address Mayor Robinson said:

"I want all you people to understand that we will not have to annex to Los Angeles in order to receive the benefits of this outfall sewer. There is to be no additional fee. We are to be treated the same as Los Angeles itself. I have been rejoicing ever since I heard of this plan, which was brought to us by the city of Los Angeles itself. I believe that Glendale should remain an independent city, however. It is possible that it will cost Glendale $250,000 and even more to connect with this outfall, but if we get out for anything like this expense I will consider the city mighty lucky. But we've got to get busy on this question, and that right now."

"I want to thank Dr. Russell and her committee," said Councilman Lapham, "for the wonderful work they have done. They have rendered to this city a service, the value of which mighty few people realize. I see clearly that we will have to construct an activated sludge system, which will be done away with just as soon as our connection with the outfall sewer is made. As a temporary proposition this sludge plant should meet with no opposition."

"I attended the meeting of the Federated Improvement association when this matter was presented by City Engineer Griffin of Los Angeles," said Councilman Kimlin, "and I was very much impressed by the proposition. If it is possible to open negotiations with Los Angeles which would lead to our being permitted to connect with this outfall sewer we should by all means lose no time in doing so."

Councilman Stephenson said:

"The sewer problem is Glendale's biggest question. I am most heartily in favor of doing anything we can to relieve the situation, both temporarily and permanently. If we can connect with the Los Angeles outfall sewer by paying our share of the damage, I will consider it a mighty fine way out of the difficulty. Count me in on this thing."

The following resolution was adopted:

"Whereas the city of Los Angeles has recently voted bonds for the construction of a new outfall sewer, and

"Whereas, the city of Glendale is seeking a satisfactory means of disposal of sewage, and a connection with said proposed new outfall sewer of the city of Los Angeles, would, if it could be secured on suitable terms, be a satisfactory means of disposal of Glendale sewage.

"Now, therefore, be it resolved by the council of the city of Glendale,

"That the city of Los Angeles be requested to enter into negotiations with a view to making some mutually satisfactory arrangements for the disposal of Glendale sewage, through said new Los Angeles outfall sewer, and the mayor and city manager are hereby directed to take the matter up with the proper authorities in the city of Los Angeles."

Peter L. Ferry then addressed the board and suggested that the city engineer draw up a plan and diagram of the proposed sewer system of Glendale and that if possible the sewer pipes be laid in the streets while they are in the course of being improved.

On motion of Councilman Stephenson, the city engineer was instructed to prepare complete maps and plans of the sewer mains and laterals for the proposed sewer system of Glendale

Councilman Kimlin then moved that thereafter it be the policy of the board to lay the sewer mains and the sewer laterals up to the property lines just as soon as the proposed plan for the sewer system has been prepared and accepted. This motion was carried.

MONTHLY NIGHT C. OF C. FORUM

Announcement is made today that the chamber of commerce will hold one even forum meeting each month. This is on account of the fact that many of the members are in business in Los Angeles and are unable to attend the noon-day forum meetings.

The first evening forum will be held next Tuesday evening, September 26 at 6:30 p. m., in the chamber of commerce dining room.

Capt. Richmond P. Hobson, hero of the Merrimac, will address the meeting on a community subject. A splendid talk is promised. The regular program of community matters in which the public is interested will be presented and there will be committee reports and other routine matters.

A splendid, appetizing dinner is promised and every member is urged to come and bring his family. Tickets are $1.00 the plate, and reservations should be made early to avoid the rush.

FASHION CENTER FORMAL OPENING SEPTEMBER 30

"The Fashion Center," Glendale's new shop for women's apparel, has chosen wisely in its location in the Butts building at the corner of Brand and Harvard or 202 South Brand, and is planning to have its preliminary showing Saturday at noon in a wonderful specials opening in coats, suits, dresses, lingerie and hosiery, daytime frocks and millinery. Its formal opening will not take place until Saturday, September 30, when a beautiful fur wrap wil be bestowed on the fortunate person who holds the lucky number on the tickets which are to be given away to visitors regardless of whether they buy or not during the coming week.

The Fashion Center is to be an establishment operated entirely independent of any chain of stores, the members of the firm having all been buyers for large department stores. M. J. McKinnon who heads the list was a buyer of women's apparel; Miss Emma Heitz specialized in silk underwear, hosiery, etc.; Miss Minnie Hapke was a buyer of millinery; R. L. Dines has been store and display manager. All have had years of experience in New York and other eastern markets and are therefore able to buy very close and give their patrons the benefit.

Friday evening there will be a window display, and, as stated, the public will be admitted Saturday noon.

BEDSPREADS

The revival of the old candlewick bedspreads has brought to light many attractive patterns. The Mayflower bedspreads, with their well-planned designs ready to be worked out in blue or orange or any color one desires, are particularly good.

DAINTY PARISIENNE WITH UNIQUE PARASOL THAT CONVENIENTLY FOLDS INTO HANDLE

This photograph, just received from Paris, shows a type of parasol that has been very popular in the French capital. When closed, it collapses and fits into the large handle. The lace covering is daringly colored in cerise, royal blue and green.

FRENCH MODISTE AMAZED BY COLORS

Declares French Women All Wear Black; Only Americans Use Colors

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—"The only women who wear colors in Paris are the Americans," said Madame Florence DuFresne, a Parisian modiste, as she visited Fifth Avenue to see what our American styles really are.

"I expected to see many colors here," she added, "but everyone, regardless of age or complexion, uses whole costumes of the most vivid colors imaginable and it quite overwhelms one. There are colors that we Parisians would fear to use even sparingly as in a sash end or in a flower for the chapeau. In Paris every one wears black for evening as well as for street use—and when we add a dash of color, it is merely of a jewel to set off the black gown.

"The French woman is too thrifty to buy bright colored gowns, knowing that she will become tired of them, long before they are worn out. Her husband is also thrifty. He wants his wife to be well dressed, but not at the sacrifice of his bank deposits.

"For that reason the French woman spends about one-third of the amount that the American woman does upon her clothing. She purchases a black gown that is perfectly suited to her figure, paying little heed to the silhoute of the moment. Then as the season progresses she uses her gown as a background, adding little touches to give it the chic of the moment. It may be a panel, a buckle, a chain, or the changing of the sleeve. Her gown is like the artist's canvas and she adds little daubs to it continually, so that the end of the season it is an entirely different gown from the one that she purchased earlier in the season."

Milliners, influenced no doubt by the vogue for the long skirts, are sponsoring the wide-brimed hats in silhouettes that range from the tailored types to tricorn and picture shape. Black is the accepted color used and velvet is the outstanding fabric. Ostrich in various treatments and burnt peacock are the prevailing trimmings. Just now the back trims is strongly favored.

The beaded shoulder strap for the formal gown is being used by most of the smart shops. Even where no other beading appears on the gown except the beaded ornament that is placed at one side to grasp the drape, these bead straps are used. Most of the handsome brocaded tissue cloth and velvet gowns have no embellishment other than a beaded girdle and beaded shoulder straps.

FALL EVENING WEAR

Silver cloth outshines all other materials for evening wear, being used in wraps gowns, bags and slippers. Crushed silver cloth is by all means the loveliest material that we have had in years for evening apparel. When an entire gown is made of it, simply draped and with the long side panel it can not help being a creation. A gown of this type was shown at the recent Fashion show and created quite a furror among the out-of-town buyers. It was made of crushed silver with the side-drape, the low waist line, the popular rounding-necked, sleeveless bodice and the trailing side-panel. With the exception of a silver buckle and a wide band of ermine on the panel it was unadorned. The wrap which accompanied it was of the reversible type, using red velvet lined with ermine.

Perhaps the prettiest wrap displayed in the fashion pageants was the wrap of crushed silver cloth combined with ermine and monkey fur. The deep rolled ermine collar used money fur as a border and monkey fur banded the bottom of the wrap. There are many combinations used on these silver wraps. Usually they are lined with brilliant green or red velvet so that they may be reversed. They are collared with chinchilla, ermine, monkey fur and white fox.

Wraps of ermine dyed in bisque tones are gorgeous additions to the formal wrap department. This season there is a great deal of fur-dyeing. Skunk dyed grey, mole dyed black, and grey dyed ermine are among the most successful.

The woman who hasn't purchased one of the long wrap-around dresses yet will be shrewd to wait until those same models appear in velvet, for velvet is to be the popular material for the fall gown and is far more exquisite than silk crepe. Velvet lends itself to drapery better than the crepe and certainly has the richness that is necessary for the long-lined silhouette.

The separate coats for fall will follow the lines of the gowns being draped or paneled. Where the side-drape is used there is a clever clasp or a many-looped bow. These coats will be anything but tailored.

Sleeves will be long for street wear with short sleeves predominating for afternoon wear. The normal waistline will be worn on gowns where the bodice is connected to a very full skirt or where the skirt is distended on the hips or ruffled just below the waistline. But the hip waistline will hold its popularity in spite of the introduction of the above mentioned types. Jeweled girdles, Egyptian chain effects more marvelous in detail than any we have previously seen will be used on the long waisted gowns.

Brick-red, orange-rust and bottle green are colors that are deemed exceedingly smart this season.

STRAWS WHICH SHOW THE WINDS OF FASHION

Parisian authorities predict that beaded blouses will hold over for another season, but they are reverting to the small collar which can be worn high or with the V opening in front.

Men dressmakers of the east have announced with definite authority that the coming season the dress will dominate the costume, i. e., it will dictate the wrap, which must match it in color. They also predict a great vogue for the luxurious fur-lined cape, made in sufficient variety of form to afford opportunity for picturesque draping suggestive of the 17th century.

Circular skirts, long at the sides and worn with Russian blouses, richly embroidered, will also be encouraged by the czars of fashion.

HI NEW MEMBERS INITIATED BY TEACHERS

The new members of the faculty of the high school were initiated into the Teachers' Club of the school at an altogether delightful picnic held at Brookside Park Thursday evening, and responded with a clever impromptu entertainment arranged by Harold L. Brewster of the dramatic section of the school who posed as the manager of a country theatre and introduced his talent.

Miss Helen Hairgrove was chairman of the committee which was responsible for the picnic supper over which all guests were enthusiastic. Its menu included sandwiches, coffee, pickles and olives, maccaroni and cheese, fruit salad, ice cream and cake.

Norman Hayhurst was chairman of the transportation and so fine was the team work of his committee that when the school day ended at 4:15 the cars stood in front of the school loaded for the start.

Mrs. Moir who headed the committee in charge of place cards and decorations turned out some very clever cards which furnished a lot of entertainment. Mrs Sloan, for example, discovered that her place was labelled "Slow Ann." Others were disguised equally as well.

Miss Mary Hairgrove and committee were responsible for the setting of the tables.

Paul Webb as president and Miss Iva Hunter as head of the social committee presided, and Mr. Brewster, as stated, took the chairmanship of the entertainment committee made up of new teachers as follows: Carey Ballard, Ethel Bailey, Florence Carpenter, Mary Gladys Corry, Anna S. Elam, Carrie Evelyn Hanley, Jessie M. Hill, Merritt L. Hoblit, Mrs. Parr, Carol Willisford Kolts, O. E. McDowell, Elsie Maennel, Daisy Monroe, Mabel Odell, Florence Parker, Grace Rensch, Mary Rigg, Fanny F. Sloan, Mildred Veazey, Eugene Wolfe, Josefa Seely, Harold Wilson and Hubert White.

When Mr. Brewster mounted the stage in Prince Albert coat and stovepipe hat, he explained the rules of the theatre assuring his audience that crying babies would be excluded and no rough neck stuff would be allowed.

Miss Mildred Veazey contributed a "clean sweep" with a new broom. Miss Elam read the score of a movie scene which called for a hero a heroine and a villain and which was presently enacted in pantomine; Mrs. Kolts and Miss Corry did a "tight rope balancing act," the rope being laid across the stage on top of a net. Mr. McDowell was the "strong man" who demonstrated with an onion which later brought tears to the eyes of many in the audience. There were several other numbers one being an A. B. C. skit in which Miss Hill was the heroine and Mr. Wolfe the hero.

There were 96 in attendance and it was the largest, jolliest social meeting the High School Teachers' Club has ever held, and demonstrated a splendid spirit of comradship and co-operation.

F. L. M'CUNE BUYS IN PAGE FURNITURE COMPANY

Wm. C. Page, who has been sole owner of the Page Furniture company, 306-308 East Broadway, has sold an half interest in the business to F. L. McCune, of El Centro, who will shortly move here with his family, and take an active interest in the business with Mr. Page.

The rapidly growing business of this reliable concern has made it necessary for Mr. Page to expand and Mr. McCune joins the organization at a time when prospects were never brighter for the phenomenal growth and development of the city. Mr. McCune has been in the furniture business at El Centro for eleven years, and had one of the largest stocks in that city. He is a live business man, a good citizen and will be a big acquisition to the business personell of Glendale. The Page Furniture company will increase its stock and add new lines, which will give Glendale an up-to-date furniture store with a stock of nearly $100,000. Additional store room will be secured and the Page-McCune Furniture company, the name which the new concern will use after October 1, will rank among the biggest city stores, none excepted. The credit and easy payment plan systems used by all first class furniture stores, will be inaugurated by the Page-McCune Furniture company and the same accommodations and class of goods will be given the Glendale people as the big city stores have to offer. Mr. McCune made a big success of his El Centro business, but the climate was one of the considerations that induced him to sell his business there and come to Glendale.

ELKS BAND TO GIVE CONCERT TONIGHT

First of a Series Arranged to Be Given by Home Outfit

The first of a series of concerts will be given by the Glendale Elks band on the steps of the city hall tonight. It will start promptly at 7:45 o'clock and will continue for about an hour and a half. R. E. Kinney, director of the band, has prepared an especially pleasing program for tonight's concert, and he says his band boys are right on edge for the event.

These concerts will be given every Friday night and they will be given alternately between the city hall and the intersection of Brand and Broadway, at which place next week's program will be given.

The expenses of these concerts are being met jointly by the city and the merchants. It is realized that something in the way of music should be provided for Glendale, especially as there is such an excellent musical organization as the Elks band available at very reasonable expense.

NEW CAFETERIA IS PLANNED FOR PACIFIC

A new cafeteria for the Pacific Avenue school was the principal subject under discussion at the first regular meeting of the Parent-Teacher association. Mrs. Mae Rosenberg, president, was in charge.

Just before the meeting, a session of the boar was held with 18 members present. The board is represented by the officers and committee chairmen.

The teachers' greeting or party of welcome will be given October 6 at the high school and Mrs. Alcholz, chairman of courtesy, is in charge. The treasurer's report showed a balance of $70. The matter of serving tea or some light refreshment was discussed and it was voted to serve something light at each meeting.

Mrs. George Moore, newly elected vice president, presented her resignation on account of being transferred to another district. The resignation was accepted with regrets. Mrs. Dean Phillips was elected to fill the vacancy.

This completed the board meeting and the regular P.-T. A. meeting followed. A salute of the flag lead by Mrs. Harry MacMullin, patriotic chairman, opened the session, followed by the singing in unison of "America."

The reports of the secretary and treasurer were read and a list of the new officers and chairmen were read. Each officer and chairman was requested to stand, so as to become better known to the members.

The main subject under discussion was the matter of a cafeteria for the school. Mrs. Knessler, who has charge of the cafeteria at Columbus Avenue, gave a talk on the management and on the menus. An informal discussion followed and numerous questions asked. The matter of children buying cheap, colored candies was taken up and some of the harmful results shown.

A committee was appointed to look into the matter of the cafeteria and report at the next meeting.

Mrs. E. B. Moore, new federation president, was introduced and she announced the first district conference to be held in Pasadena, Oct. 26. She extended a special invitation to all members to attend the regular meetings of the federation the second Wednesday of each month. Mrs. Rosenberg extended a cordial invitation for all ladies to attend the reading circle, which is opening next Wednesday.

Two delightful piano solos were rendered by Miss May Smith, a music teacher of Glendale. R. D. White was then introduced and spoke briefly on the extremely crowded conditions of the schools and the prospect of relief in the near future, showing how the school board was trying to work it out. He also spoke on the cafeteria proposition and told of the one at Intermediate school.

The officers of the association acted as hostesses of the afternoon and served ice tea and cake in the corridor.

MOTTERNS MARK TWENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY

In the company of more than 50 relatives, neighbors and old friends who had assembled to felicitate them upon the occasion, Rev. and Mrs. R. W. Mottern celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding at their home, 211 North Adams street, Thursday evening.

It was quite informal and all the more delightful for that reason. China asters had been used in decoration and over a wide doorway was twined asparagus fern, the figures forming two dates—1897 and 1922—being suspended below.

The walls of the home had hangings of beautiful paintings in water color, crayon, and India ink, all the handiwork of Rev. Mottern himself, he being an amateur artist. There was a receiving line which was in evidence most of the time during the first of the evening, though it often dissolved in the friendly visiting that went on. In this line besides the special celebrants, Rev. and Mrs. Mottern, were Mr. and Mrs. T. Weien of Eagle Rock, who were celebrating their 17th anniversary, also George Dougherty, cousin of Mrs. Mottern, and Mrs. Dougherty. The Doughertys and Motterns are neighbors.

Mrs. Mottern was very handsome in her gray satin and lace gown, and Rev. Mottern was a proud husband. The hostess carried a large and wonderfully beautiful bouquet, the gift of her old friend and guest Mrs. Parker of Pasadena, who knew the Motterns in Pennsylvania. The bouquet contained 13 different sorts of roses combined with pink crepe myrtle, sword fern and brake. The remarriage of host and hostess had been planned, but Rev. Edmonds who was to have officiated, was prevented from coming until late by another wedding.

The only program was provided by the daughter of the house, Miss Elizabeth Mottern, who sang "Pansies" by Cox, and "Love Like the Dawn Came Stealing" by Cadman.

The gift table was adorned with a beautiful array of silver, spoons, forks, knives, butter spreaders, etc., besides a cream and sugar set of glass overlaid with silver, and some fine linen, and the hostess was the recipient of a card from Mrs. J. B. Wallace bearing the following verse:

"Rev. R. W. Mottern decided it was his fate,
To take Miss Jennie Dougherty for his mate
On this same day in the church to them so dear
The preacher's voice rang out stern and clear—
'Remember this sentence is for life,
I therefore pronounce you husband and wife.'"

Refreshments of ice cream and cake were served at the close of the evening.

Following is a list of the guests: Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Anderson and Miss Elsa Anderson, of La Canada; Mr. and Mrs. Monroe Hunter, Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Farner, Mrs. William C. Reith and Wilhelmina Reith, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph E. Berry, Mr. and Mrs. George H. Rowe, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. T. Weien of Eagle Rock, Mrs. F. P. Wilkin, George F. May, Louise R. Dougherty, Mr. and Mrs. George Dougherty, Mrs. O. S. Palmer, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Parker of Pasadena, Dr. Laura Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Guy H. Morton, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence, Adrienne Lawrence and Mrs. Slosie, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Harper, Mrs. J. P. Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. R. Z. Imler of Los Angeles, Mrs. J. B. Wallace, Mrs. H. P. Doughty of Oklahoma City, Dr. and Mrs. H. R. Boyer, Dr. and Mrs. C. M. Crist, Mr. and Mrs. Glen Porter, Rev. and Mrs. A. B. Smart, Rev. and Mrs. W. E. Edmonds, Rev. and Mrs. Louis Tinning, Elizabeth and Dorsey Mottern.

NEW DEPARTMENT OF MUSIC HOUSE

In addition to the departments already being successfully managed by the Glendale Music company at 109 North Brand boulevard by Salmacia brothers, that business firm has recently added the department of refinishing, making it one of the most efficient and complete service departments in Southern California.

The store has been enlarged by the building of an addition at the rear. Efficient help has been placed in the repair and refinishing departments of both phonographs and pianos.

J. S. Huddy, who lately was secured to take charge of the refinishing department, served as apprentice thirty years ago for the New England Piano company, and later was employed by Henry F. Miller, high grade piano manufacturer. To prove the character of the work done, refinishing of pianos and phonographs will be done at half price for a limited time only, it is stated. The Glendale Music company announces that it feels fortunate in securing the services of a capable and experienced refinisher such as Mr. Huddy.

C. D. Williams, piano tuner and repair man, has been in the employ of the Glendale Music company for three years and has proven his ability to the residents of this city to such an extent that his work is constantly in demand, says the company.

LA CRESCENTA PERSONALS

LA CRESCENTA, Sept. 20.—Mr. and Mrs. Fred B. Caldwell of Eagle Rock, announce the arrival of a little son, Benton Boal. Their many friends in this valley, where Mr. Caldwell was a resident for many years, will rejoice with them.

Mrs. Mark Collins of Honolulu avenue will entertain the Ladies' Circle from the Venice Union church, Friday, with a picnic luncheon in her beautiful pergola.

Mr. Mark Collins has purchased of Mr. Denato Cozzoleno, his house on the south side of Prospect avenue for a home and expects to move in as soon as they sell their house on Honolulu avenue.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. MacDonald and their daughter, Miss Bettie, will be glad to know they have returned to La Crescenta valley, having leased the Marie Anderson home on Mountain avenue for the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. John S. Erwin returned Tuesday evening from Fresno, Calif., where they went to attend the funeral of Mr. Erwin, brother, who recently died at Tujunga.

We wish to thank our many friends of Glendale, La Crescenta and Tujunga for their great kindness and sympathy in our recent bereavement in the loss of our beloved husband and brother.

MRS. EMMA ERWIN,
JOHN S. ERWIN.

Mr. George Willington is building a large addition to his house on Briggs avenue, also a garage for four cars and expects to be ready for guests by the first of November.

STOCKING BOX SELLING SCARFS

The Stocking Box Shop reports a remarkable business in the fashionable wool scarfs of which it has a most attractive stock in sport colors, this, too, in spite of weather that suggested figleaf costumes. The Corticelli hosiery which is to be such a feature of the stock, is still on the way, having been delayed by railroad troubles, but from the inquiries received it is reasonably certain there will be a great run on it when the quality and low price are discovered by discriminating buyers.

H. S. WEBB HAS RETURNED

H. S. Webb, the dry goods merchant, who returned within the week from a vacation at Hotel Del Monte, reports a delightful outing in spite of the fact that he motored alone both going and coming the whole distance of 400 miles or 800 for the round trip.

He found the hotel rather crowded as it is apt to be because it has such a scenic situation on the rocky shore overlooking the ocean and among cypress trees, the like of which are not to be seen anywhere else. He was gone about ten days and had no difficulty in whiling away the time on the golf links or just loafing and enjoying the scenery.

GUILD LADIES TO GIVE SUPPER

Arrangements for another supper and social evening were made yesterday at the regular meeting of the St. Mark's Guild, held in the Guild hall at 2:30.

Mrs. Mortimer Baker, president, was in charge of the meeting. The ladies spent the afternoon quilting and final plans were discussed in regard to their next dinner, which will be held October 19 at the church. Mrs. B. O. Holbrook is in charge of this affair.

OUTWITTING NATURE

Think of science in direct combat with the forces of the sun! The sun being the source of energy, and energy being about all there is, the luminary is entitled to respect amounting to deference. The sun is not perfect. It has facial blemishes known as sun spots. These are believed to have a distinct influence. It is impossible to change the complexion of the sun, but it is possible to lessen the influence of the spots. This is what the scientist is striving to accomplish.

The sun spots are believed to shower the earth with more electricity than mundane requirements demand. The excess leads to confusion. It interferes with every phase of electric service. It paralyzes the telegraph and telephone. It causes fires, burns out fuses, short circuits the whole business, and makes repair men work overtime. So the government observatory has undertaken to report sun spots just as the meterological bureau sends out warning of the itinerary of storms, and tells the farmer to make ready. When a spot appears at the lunar rim, and starts to travel across, the concerns merchandizing in electric current will make preparations to meet the conditions certain to arise. Just what measure will be taken remains the secret of the cunning craftsman, but doubtless he will find a way to escape disaster owing to an over-supply of current.

Sun spots are said to occur in cycles of eleven years, and the present to be about midway between manifestations. In this case there will be plenty of time to get ready for whatever the spots project earthward next time. Perhaps the extra current may be stored and made to work when needed.

TRUSTING AMERICA

In his Sunday sermon a minister remarked that Armenia had reason to trust America more than all the nations. This doubtless is the case. It has looked to the people of this country for aid and had been abundantly answered. Money and material have been sent in great volume in the attempt to do something to save a people that, except for such intervention, seemed to be doomed. This charity has been on the part of pirvate citizens or groups of citizens. Whether it is possible by continuing it, to benefit the survivors of more recent atrocities, is a question.

The powers are taking a singular view of the Turks. France for example, indicates that it intends to do nothing until Kemal, their leader, has been gulity of an overt act. What is an overt act? The path of Kemal has been marked by blazing villages, by slaughter, looting and rapine. The triumphant forces, drunk on the blood of the innocent, are moving towards the neutral zone with apparent intent to attack. If there is no overt act to be discerned in this, France must be awaiting some conduct marked by stupendous frightfulness quite incomprehensible in advance. Italy holds a similar view apparently. Only England shows a tendency to take arms and beat back the horrid invasion.

So far as the United States is concerned, it is helpless. In refusing to enter the League of Nations it declared officially that the conduct of Europe was none of its affair. An admonition from this government would be as futile as a finger raised to dissuade a mad bull charging a red banner. Regret may be expressed, and probably will be, over the conditions that prevail, but to the forces responsible for the conditions, this will not be a matter either of importance or interest.

PITIFUL TRAGEDY

The tragedy at Jackson proved to be complete. Not a man of the forty-seven shut into the mine escaped. After the first few days there was no recognizable chance of escape. As the days dragged into weeks, the pretense of the expressed hopefulness was apparent. Had the atmospheric conditions been favorable, the men could not have survived weeks of starvation. The suggested possibility was unthinkable. There is a grain of comfort now in the knowledge that the men died quickly, and that to the last they had deported themselves not only as men, but as heroes. No panic of despair overtook them. They could not have been fully aware of the desperateness of the situation, and buoyed by the thought of release, they sought to prolong life until rescue should come. Their efforts vain, the clutch of death at their throats, they laid down, and calmly passed away. In the last moments they had not forgotten ties of affection. Father and son lay side by side, brother was comrade to brother in the darkness and silence. While there had been frantic efforts to reach them, for them the final peace had come.

That precautions might have been taken that would have prevented the disaster is not a thing lightly to be said. Naturally there will be a rigid investigation. Even if there is no blame to be fixed, there must, in this dreadful sacrifice of human life, have been a lesson that will be heeded. The devotion and bravery of the rescue parties was a fine exhibition of courage and endurance. To know that such material is available in every crisis, thrills the pride. And yet how infinitely better to avoid the crisis.

EUROPE'S WAR SPIRIT

Before the world war astute writers had formulated the theory that there could be no more armed conflict. They demonstrated that it had become economically impossible. They set forth that the agencies of destruction had become so terrible that no nation would think of war. Immediately following this, the world burst into a hateful flame bent upon the destruction of life and the imperilling of civilization. It was fighting, it declared between volleys, a war against war. Victory meant permanent peace. Just like that.

The great war has been over a few years. In this interval a surprising number of the powers have seemed to be poised for new onslaught. The great expense of France, as of some lesser countries, is to keep its military establishment in fighting trim. Just now Turkey, that was on the losing side, is causing so much disturbance that the allies may have to unite against its encroachments. Either they will unite or Turkey will have its way, and the already threatened friendship between England and France perhaps be fatally jeopardized.

Of course all this concerns the people of the United States very closely. They raised an army that peace might everywhere prevail. They behold the peace still a dream. This in itself is a perturbing spectacle. Americans are interested in a financial way. Europe owes them vast sums of money. Concerning the time and method of paying this there is some doubt. Suggestion has ever been made that the debt be effaced as an act of amity. In the circumstances, to do so would be merely to support European armies. Americans could not be expected to do this. Such a course would be contrary to their own principles as made plain by their advocacy of disarmament. Europe would be doing better for itself were it to curb its war spirit, and get back at work long neglected.

Thousands of Arizona people have signed a petition asking that $5000 be appropriated by the state for the support of the family of a motorcycle policeman killed in discharge of his official duty. While this shows that their hearts are in the right place, it is likely to run foul of constitutional limitations. If every signer of the petition were to chip in four-bits, the situation would be fully met.

Government By Special Interests

By DR. FRANK CRANE

One of the dangers of democracy is governmen by special interests.

Like all living things, democracy fares forward o its dim and perilous way, men aced by infinite dangers. Th continuous miracle is the persist ence of life. There are a thous and reasons why everything tha is alive should have died lon ago.

Doubtless democracy will wi past every peril eventually, bu that should not make us shut ou eyes to the things that threate

And one of the chief minator elements in the situation is t influence exerted upon gover ment by compact minorities.

That is the dark feature of t tariff bill. Most citizens of the United States are i favor of some sort of tariff. But it is the way t tariff was made that is alarming.

When the tariff on wool is advocated by men w are themselves owners of great flocks, and the tar on sugar by those heavily interested in beet sug and so on, we see a government moulded not for t public good but for private advantage. The bou may or may not be a good thing, but what is a ba thing is to see the men that will directly profit f the bonus organizing together to cajole and threat congress.

In the government's relation toward industry, or special group interested in capital and investmer maintains a vigorous lobby, and another spec group composed of labor leaders is liberal in threa ening gestures.

And then we have an incipient effort to sol dif the woman vote, the wet vote, the negro vote, t German vote, and probably in time we shall have th red-haired vote and the hunch-back vote.

Government by party lends itself easily to t power exerted by these special groups. A party i essentially an organization whose end and aim is t get office. Its meat and drink are spoils.

Men who are elected consider themselves to be under obligations to their party first, and to the nation after.

The pity of all this is that it is characteristic by American. We take it all as a matter of course, a d we pooh-pooh and pish-trush any one that suggests that we can run a government on any other principle but that of graft.

In the new course of study for evening elementary schools we notice in the syllabus of history a subje t entitled "The American Party System of Govern ment."

Our constitution does not provide for a party system of government, and never contemplated any such system. A democrat or a republican has no place in the halls of congress, which is supposed to be for the representatives of the people.

We have only to carry the party politics and private interests ideas a little further and we will get into the condition of those South American republics which are frankly controlled by politihal nliques whose openly declared purpose is plunder.

The First Article

"A Constant Reader": "Kindly let me know on what date 'The Right Word' column was started. I should like to obtain back copies from the beginning to July 28, inclusive. Owing to the interest I take in the column I have become a reader of your paper." Answer: The column first appeared in The New York Globe on Tuesday, February 14, 1922. It began in other papers throughout the country on various dates beginning April 10, 1922. If you will write the Circulation Department of your paper I am sure you will be accommodated.

"Sugared" and "Watered"

W. D. Paul: "Will you kindly inform me through your column if it is permissible to say 'I have sugared the berries, and I have watered the lawn?' Can these two nouns be used as past participles in this way?" Answer: You used the words correctly. They are not nouns as you have used them.

"Elapse" vs. "Lapse"

Mildred Karp: "The writer will thank you to kindy cerify (a split infinitive) the correctness of the following sentence: 'After an elapse of three years he returned home'. If it is incorrect, kindly state reasons." Answer: Elapse is a verb. The right word is lapse.

Yesterday's Error

"Whereas the word 'dove' is a slangy colloquialism which is not recognized by correct lexicographers and may not be in some dictionaries at all."

The foregoing group of words are not a sentence. Whereas is a conjunction, but there is no clause to which it can join the clause that follows it. Whereas should have been omitted.

IN THE LISTENING POST

Life might be compared with the loaf.

If it were all flour without yeast it would be heavy and soggy.

And if it were all yeast without flour it would be light and airy.

But without much nourishment.

There is a wide distinction between sentiment and sentimentality.

One is a real and the other is a practiced emotion.

One brings help to the needy and the other brings only mush to the mouth—the mush of mere words.

So the loaf needs to have nourishment.

It needs to have a practical basis.

And then it needs yeast to leaven it.

Just as life needs to be builded on a practical basis.

A lot of people dancing and mumbling about beauty and art and sentimentality would be very hungry if the farmers of us did not get on their jumpers and go out into the field.

The house would be rather stale, flat and unprofitable without a gas stove, a bath and light and heat.

If a man established a bank and lent money to whoever might be in need, he would be full of sentimentality but his bank would not last long.

Because it would have no practical basis.

And the depositors would be the first to disestablish the bank.

By the withdrawal of their money.

For there is very little sentiment about our savings and their husbanding.

We want to be sure they are safe.

It may be a narrow view of life, but it is the human nature of us.

And all of us have the same human nature.

But if the banker established the bank with the flour of good sense and care, and the leaven of a broad and deep humanity, he would be providing a loaf that serves the community well.

Neither flour nor leaven alone is enough.

They must be mixed in the right proportion.

* * *

The difficulty with a great many reformers is that they have no sense of practical values.

They run off to the extreme of a muchy sentimentality.

Instead of standing fairly between a blind radicalism and a timid conservatism.

The eminent physician who gave his services for nothing to anyone who might need them would soon have no services worth giving.

Because he would not survive in a world of every day.

And yet the eminent physician cannot afford to take pay for all his services.

He needs to give away much of service.

That his spirit may be leavened with humanity.

* * *

The grocer who gave away groceries to whoever might need them would soon have nothing left to give away.

His stock of goods and credit would be exhausted.

And so we might run the whole scale of human activities to discover how much we need flour as well as leaven.

* * *

No man and no society can be all flour or all yeast.

All sentimentality and no practical sense.

Or all hard headedness and no softheartedness.

We need a mixture in the right proportion of sentiment and hard sense.

So we need to harness Pegasus sometimes to a plow and make him work.

For life and the loaf are not by flour alone.

But by flour and yeast and salt.

SONGS OF THE POETS

Absence—By Richard Jago (1715-1781)

th leaden foot Time creeps along
While Delia is away:
h her, nor plaintive was the song,
Nor tedious was the day.

Ah, envious Pow'r, reverse my doom;
Now double thy career,
Strain ev'ry nerve, stretch ev'ry plume,
And rest them when she's here.

Prehistoric Observanory Unearthed by Archeologist seat of science among prestoric Americans has been covered. Dr. J. Walter wkes, chief of the Bureau American Ethnology of the ithsonian Institution, after ree months of archeological ld work at Mesa Verde National Park, Colorado, reports e finding of an astronomical bservatory used by the ancient cliff dwellers in calculating time for their farming operations.

A round tower, 15 feet in ameter and 10 feet high, probably used for observations of the sun on the horizon at sunrise and sunset, and the information gained was used in determining the time for planting and performing other agricultural operations. In front of "Far View Tower," as this observatory has been named, there are the ruins of three underground rooms that Dr. Fewkes believes were used for the worship of the sun and other sky gods.

A large mound was also opened and investigated by the expedition. When work began no walls were visible. The site was covered with fallen stones and earth capped by sage brush, identical with many other elevations found in the immediate vicinity. The removal of vegetation and debris, and an excavation of the rooms revealed a rectangular building 70 feet square with walls averaging one-story high. It had indications of a lofty tower in the middle of the western side, which must have imparted to the building somewhat the appearance of a church steeple, or minaret of a mosque. The large room was subterranean, situated in the center of the ruin, its floor being about 25 feet below that of the other rooms. This subterranean room is a kiva but differs from others of like type on the park in that it has no fireplace in the center of the floor, no ventilator or deflector and has eight mural pilasters instead of six to support its roof.

The fallen walls within showed indications of a great fire, the stones and adobe being turned brick color and the walls bright red by the great heat. On the floor of the kiva 25 feet deep was an enclosure set off by a semicircular wall where the action of fire was particularly evident. In the enclosure was found many votive offerings, the most numerous of which were a dozen clay tobacco pipes of various shapes and sizes, one or two decorated on their exteriors. These pipes, which are the first ever found on the Mesa Verde, had evidently been smoked by the priests and then thrown into the shrine. With the pipes the shrine also contained several fine stone knives, small decorated clay platters, various fetishes and other objects. Pipe Shrine House was entered on the south by two doorways midway between which a large pictograph of a coiled serpent was incised on a large stone set in the wall.

To the south of the building there was a plaza surrounded by a retaining wall and directly opposite one of the entrances there are aboriginal steps which lead to a rectangular shrine four feet in size, in which were found a number of water-worn stones and a meteorite surrounding a large stone image of the mountain lion. The contents of this shrine were replaced, the mountain lion left in his original position and the enclosure covered with a netting to prevent the possible removing of the objects from their places. Other shrines and several stone idols of size were found in the neighborhood. The idols found at Pipe Shrine House represent the snake, mountain lion, mountain sheep and bird, an important discovery as previously only one stone animal had been found at the Mesa Verde Park.

Dr. Fewkes declares that one of the most instructive experiences of the archaeologist is to see a skeleton centuries old as it lies in the grave. One of the ancient people of Pipe Shrine house was left in a prepared chamber for tourists to inspect. The cemetery lies on the southeast corner of this ruin and in it were found several human burials from one of which a good skeleton was chosen to illustrate the manner of burial and the mortuary offerings. This skeleton was not removed from the grave but was surrounded by a stone wall, forming a room rectangular in shape protected by a grating and a waterproof roof. Visitors may now see one of the skeletons of the race of cliff dwellers as he was placed in his grave more than 500 years ago. Not a single bone has been moved from position. This is the first time in North American archaeology that an effort has been made to protect an Indian skeleton and leave it just as it laid for centuries.

If you were flying over the ocean and your engine broke and dropped you into the water; and a long, low, rakish, bootlegging schooner came along and picked you up and revived you with a sample from the cargo, and went out of its lawless way to land you on a beach close to home and frends;' and, when the stern minions of the law came to you to demand a complete description of the long, low, rakish craft and its contraband cargo and the wicked crew—

COMMENT ON DAY'S NEWS

By HENRY JAMES

Kipling surely has kicked up a muss. It is an operation he generally enjoys, but this time it is doubtful if he is getting much pleasure out of it.

The hubbub arose over an interview he gave a correspondent. In his remarks he slammed the United States variously. When he observed the resentment his course had caused, he made a second mistake in denying the interview. Such denial is an ancient trick, and never works satisfactorily.

HENRY JAMES

It is true that reporters, touching upon trivial subjects, have been known to put words into the mouth of another never uttered by that person. As a rule, however, this has been with the consent of the person in question, who had asked that views he had been known to entertain, be set forth in the reporter's own language.

On a publication of standing, a fake interview would be the reporter's quickest road to dismissal. It would not be tolerated by the editor. Countless interviews have been denied, the reporter having told the truth, and the other party having lied. Every editor knows this and so does every reporter of experience.

Kipling displeased his own countrymen by the interview. They say that the author is over-rated in this country, and that at home he cuts very little ice, so to speak. But this is not just either. Kipling has been a great writer, many of his poems virile, and permanent contributions to literature; many of his short stories well-nigh matchless. In this particular instance he got off on the wrong foot. Then he disputed the word of a reputable correspondent, and thought to get away with it.

Kipling belongs to the past as truly as though stamped "Victorian." There could have been no occasion for asking his opinion of anything new stirring the minds of men.

It is unpleasant to read that in Berlin people again are standing in long lines in front of food shops. That was a sight to which Germany was accustomed in war time.

While the war raged, and Germans believed it a righteous war, they bore the hardship with patience. They are less patient now. Prophets of evil predict bread riots for the near future. But even in these dark days for Europe, the prophet sometimes is wrong.

A newspaper takes the trouble to record the fact that Mary Langdon Baker has again left Allister McCormick, this being a circumstance to be rated as unimportant if true.

Mary long ago established the habit of leaving Allister at the church door or near it. Finding that this led to publicity, she has kept it up ever since, and the faithful scribes set down each fresh defection.

Poor Allister. There may come a day when modest Mary will forget her usual stunt, and then he'll be out of luck.

From time to time there appear advertisement offering to put girls into the movies. There are countless girls who think life will be a failure unless they shall be put in the place indicated. Such girls are easy game.

Most of the advertisements are fraudulent. Sometimes the purpose is that of swindling the girls, and sometimes it is worse.

New York has been having a race riot of sufficient magnitude to cause the calling out of the police reserves. Clubs fell impartially on the heads of blacks and whites.

Probably among the whites there were very few of American birth. As a rule these rows are made up on one side almost wholly of aliens who know nothing about America.

An American is on his way to Russia to organize the clothing industries of Petrograd and Moscow. Doubtless they need organization, and all things else essential to going concerns.

There cannot be any objection, unless it be based on sympathy, if an American workman seeks his fortune in Russia. For him to be able to introduce an area of order into that social chaos would be a triumph.

Others have gone to Russia for the purpose of undertaking industrial pursuits, and have carried their capital with them. As a rule, they have been reported a little later as in earnest quest of enough to buy a one-way ticket to the United States.

A writer mentions Turkey's "victorious army of 300,000." Another writer who is in a position to know about the matter, says the army is 70 000, short of munitions, and forced to eat off the country.

And as yet it is to be classed as "victorious" only by drawing on the imagination. Driving back the Greeks wasn't so much, and the slaughter of non-combatants was worse than nothing.

WATCHING THE PARADE

By JOHN PILGRIM

We imported an orator for the last meeting of the Boosters' club. Just between us, he wasn't much of an orator, for his stuff ran too true to pattern. It was full of the same old copyrighted jazz stuff that most of the pep-injectors have used from the days of Samuel M. Smiles. But he put over one worth-while line from some poet who was given no credit:

"If you'd like to win, but you think you can't,
It's almost a cinch you won't——"

There was more of it, and it all rhymed prettily, but those were the two lines that stuck in my head. After all, the unidentified rhymster had it right. "Out in the world, you'll find, success begins with a fellow's will. It's all in the state of mind."

I looked around the table after the word-well got through spouting and sized up my fellow boosters. Half of them had been eminently successful in business, as eminent success is classified in a small town. Every one of them—every one of the men who have made good—are strong-hearted, courageous, sunny fellows who have believed in themselves and in their business and in their town. Sometimes I have thought they boosted a little too much. I do not want to trade my corner lot in our town for a location in Paradise, but that is mere conservatism. I suspect that Paradise is much to be preferred to our town. But you would never think of it when those lads get a-going.

"You're a set of husky devils," I said to one of them, "with maybe more red corpuscles or something than the rest of us have. That's why you won."

But he said I was wrong. Not one of the successes—we talked them over as we sat at table—had any qualities that the medium successes lacked We were as alike in quality as so many potatoes from the same hill.

"Make yourself believe you can win," said he. "You can. It is surprising what tricks you can do with yourself if you try. Set your jaw and compel yourself to be sure of success. Not hopeful—to the dickens with hope. Not optimistic—that's a pale sort of hope. Be sure. And by and by you will be surprised to find that you are sure. It is no longer a fake sureness. And you will be sure because your induced sureness has won success for you."

It's worth trying. I can do it a little even now.

NEW INSURANCE MEN TO OPEN BUSINESS

John W. Knight and Jay W. Lewis, experienced insurance men from Hutchinson, Kansas, have just arrived in Glendale, and within ten days will open an insurance office here. Their temporary headquarters is located at the Buster Brown shoe store on North Brand boulevard.

Both of these men have been in the insurance business for the past eleven years. For six years they maintained a local agency in Kansas, and for five years were field representatives for the companies they represent. Mr. Knight is holding up the banner of the Royal Insurance company of Liverpool, while Mr. Lewis is with the Home Insurance company of New York. Both of these are reputable companies and for this reason Messrs Knight and Lewis feel there is a good opening for them here.

The newcomers have come to Glendale to stay. They brought their families with them and are now located at 311 North Jackson street.

"We are here to help boost Glendale," said Mr. Lewis this morning, "and we are going to do our best to grow with the city. We believe we can form a partnership with Glendale that will prove mutually profitable."

MURDER CUT SHORT COLLINS'S ROMANCE

Michael Collins and Miss Kittie Kiernan

While he was "on the run" for six years as commander-in-chief of the Irish army, with a huge price on his head, Michael Collins wooed and won the beautiful Miss Kittie Kiernan of Granard, County Longford, who was irresistibly attracted by the dashing young soldier. The romance was not disclosed until, in a personal and scathing attack upon Collins in Dail Eireann, Countess Markiewicz declared that for having signed the peace treaty with England, Collins ought to marry Princess Mary.

In a beautiful answer, Collins declared the countess was bringing pain to his fiancee—and the secret was out. The marriage was to have taken place as soon as Collins brought peace to "this most distressful land." But the wedding will never taken place, for Collins is dead at the hands of assassins, and Miss Kiernan is left to mourn.

MISS PARDON IS WED TO SABIN BUCK

The marriage of Miss Margaret Pardon and Sabin Buck was quietly solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Norton H. Pardon, of 606 North Maryland avenue, Thursday evening. Rev. W. E. Edmonds officiated with the single ring ceremony.

The Pardon home was a beautiful bower of asters in pink and white shades and just preceding the ceremony, which was witnessed by about 40 relatives, William Weldon, a cousin of the groom, sang "At Dawning" vy Cadman, accompanied at the piano by Miss Bertha Buck, another cousin of the groom.

Miss Pardon was charming in a white canton crepe gown and carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and maidenhair fern. She was attended by her sister, Miss Leah Pardon, as bridesmaid, who wore a pink taffeta frock. Eugene Sabin, cousin of the groom, acted as best man. The young couple entered the livingroom to the Wedding March from Lohengrin, played softly on the piano by Miss Bertha Buck.

Immediately following the ceremony, a reception was held and many good wishes extended the young couple. Delicious refreshments were served at this time.

Mr. and Mrs. Buck left for a wedding trip and will be at home in about a week at 606 North Maryland avenue. Mrs. Buck was the honoree at many pretty affairs before her marriage.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Buck graduated from Glendale union high school in the class of 1919, and are popular members of the younger set. They are members of the Glendale Presbyterian church.

Mrs. Buck has been on the staff of the public library and Mr. Buck is connected with the Glendale Music company, at 126 South Brand.

BURBANK OFFICERS MAKE QUICK RUN TO BLAZE

Local Firefighters Outdo Glendale in Latter's Territory

Volunteering to respond to a fire alarm in Glendale late Wednesday afternoon, members of the Burbank police department arrived at the fire 12 minutes before the Glendale fire truck arrived.

Despite an accident which occurred during the run, the Burbank fire truck arrived about six minutes previous to the arrival of the Glendale truck, which responded from the Glendale fire station located near Grand View cemetery, which is much nearer than the local station.

The accident to the local truck occurred when they passed over Santa Anita avenue, which is being improved.

Careful driving probably prevented a serious accident, as Driver Balsweid and Engineer Davis managed to stay on the truck when the accident happened. However, they were jolted against the apparatus on the truck, resulting in the driver getting a facial injury and the engineer getting a shoulder hurt.

Despite their injuries, the pair continued on the trip.

The Burbank officers who made the run were Chief Cole and Deputies, Gates, Tupper and Kyle.

Upon arrival at the scene it was learned that the fire was in an old shed, which had been set afire purposely by the owner, as he thought "it the quickest way to get rid of the shed."

RANDALL GETS ANSWER FROM LINEBERGER

Declaring Charles H. Randall had not joined issues, Congressman Walter F. Lineberger answered the challenge to a joint debate in a letter today. He said:

Mr. Charles H. Randell,
Pasadena, California.

Dear Sir: Your letter of the 18th inst. is at hand, but I can see no necessity for a joint discussion such as you suggest, unless you are against the Eighteenth amendment, the strengthening of the Volstead act, the proper protection of our lemon, walnut and other California industries, the development of our harbor, adequate legislation in favor of the veterans of all wars, child labor laws, and a square deal for labor, for all of which I stand, in addition to being a republican who thoroughly believes in the principles of the party of Lincoln, Roosevelt and Harding.

As a republican, I claim to represent the political as well as the moral sentiments of my district, and stand squarely on my record, which I do not believe you can, with sincerity, attack.

We have a republican president, a substantial republican majority in both houses, and the vast majority of voters registered in this district are republican.

As you are not a republican, it is simply a question of whether or not the voters of the district believe that I, as a dry republican, in full sympathy with the moral as well as the political sentiments of my district, can better represent them in the routine and legislative matters coming before a republican congress than one who stands on the all-embracing platform of "all things to all men."

My time is so filled with my official duties that, I as I said before, unless you are willing to go on record as against the things for which I stand, outside of our natural partisan differences, I must decline your invitation, and rest content to leave it to the decision of the voters of the Ninth congressional district on November 7, next, without intervening debate or parley between us.

In answering your letter I am ignoring your previous discourtesies to me in failing to acknowledge various letters to you, written in all good faith, and wish to advise you that since you have failed to acknowledge or reply to the letters to which I refer, I shall feel constrained to ignore future communicatoins on all matters referring to your candidacy.

I regret very much to take this action, and am doing so without any personal ill-feeling toward you, but I believe that is justified in view of the arbitrary position which you have taken in the premises.

Very truly yours,
Walter F. Lineberger,
Member of Congress.

WHITE EVENING GOWNS MOTIF OF FALL

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—White ening gowns will carry their pop- arity over into the fall months. out one gown out of every five own in the flapper and youth- models is white. A variation the beaded type is the gown of ite blistered satin trimmed in ck monkey fur.

Shades of Rudolph Valentino! e sheik gown is with us. And is made in a model that will be coming to every one of the lit- flapper followers, for it is quite ort skirted, with long sleeveless nholes and sheik figures exactly e Rudolph embroidered all over It is very vampish looking, ls.

The new three-piece costumes trimmed in short furs, such as le, squirrel nutria and dyed er- ne. Their coat linings match in or the upper portion of the vn and the panels are also lined corresponding colors.

f father brings home a cunning le padded jacket of white satin d in gold with a pair of white in trouserettes don't think it's air of fancy pajames. It's a oking set for mother to lounge ut in after the day's work. Only ently I discovered them, but was ormed by the austere saleslady t, they have been selling them months. Yes, indeedy!

Beaded girdling is now sold by yard in most of the department res and is a perfect simulation the costly girdles made on the in and medallion idea. It may found in net, steel, bronze and ored bead effects.

The time when the household on was just a homely thing of essity has passed and nowadays ons assume an important role the feminine wardrobe. The man who does her own work rs little pink or blue rubber- d aprons that look exactly like pe de chine. They are not ex- sive and can easily be washed with a damp cloth. Then the k sateen aprons collared and fed in colored cretonnes make feel ever so much more dress- up about the house.

apes and coats are having a pretty even race for popularity for the fall season. Both will be popular and it is largely a question of which style is most becoming to one.

Black bracelets widening out into large, flat medallions, set with rhinestones, are among the new accessories. They are worn between the elbow and the wrist.

Some of the season's debutantes are effecting wide, colored velvet bands about their heads for evening wear. A very dark haired flapper chose one of cerise red with a gown of mauve.

Russian boots in cutout effects, with black patent outlined in grey or red kid, are decorating some of the smart windows, but so far we haven't let the Russian influence affect our boots very seriously.

Colored linen handkerchiefs with black lace borders are being carried with the dressy frocks of black.

The fastidious woman uses snapper fastenings on her brassiers to hold her shoulder straps. She has an assortment of colored ribbons which match her gowns and does not have to worry about brassier straps showing beyond her gown. For the evening gown she uses either silver or gold ribbon.

By dropping the hem of this season's frock, adding a side panel and a fancy buckle, you will have a gown that may be used as an "extra" for the coming season, for the silhouette has not deviated materially.

WIZARD BURBANK, STILL ACTIVE AT 73, WITH WIFE AT THEIR CALIFORNIA HOME

Although Luther Burbank, the plant wizard, recently celebrated his 73rd birthday anniversary, he is busy developing more of his marvelous specimens. His latest successful experiments have been with wheat, oats and artichokes. He is shown here with Mrs. Burbank on the steps of their home at Santa Rosa.

LAUGH WITH US

"So you're engaged to Miss Oldcash, Percy?" said Algernon, extending his hand.

"Yes," said Percy, gloomily.

"Hm! Well, old man," continued Algernon, "I scarcely know whether to congratulate you or not. I know she's a very exacting old dame, although she's got plenty of coin. You'll have to give up theatres, you know, and also smoking and drinking, if you marry her."

"That's all very well," said Percy bitterly, "but the point is this—if I don't marry her, I shall have to give up eating."

Jones was thrifty. He wanted to take out a life insurance policy as an investment, but one thing stood in his way. His father had been a notorious miscreant and had met his death by hanging, and Jones knew that the form of application for insurance would contain searching questions about the habits and death of his parent. For days he thought over all possible chances of evading the truth. At last he hit upon a solution and to the question, "How did your father die?" he answered, "Father was taking part in a public function when the platform gave way."

Walter Camp, the trainer, was discussing football and its roughness. "One of Yale's roughest players," he said, "went west to work on a ranch. The cowboys, having heard of his reputation, asked him to teach them football So the man from Yale picked out two husky elevens, explained the rules and concluded his lecture with: 'If you can't kick the ball kick an opponent. Now get busy. Where's the ball?' 'Oh, forget the ball,' said a cowboy, 'let's get on with the game.'"

Mrs. Somerset Maughham, wife of the author, is an expert in house decoration. She and a friend, also an author's wife, were putting the finishing touches to the latter's new house when a mutual friend called and wished to be shown over it. The visitor, however, expressed surprise.

"How is it," she asked, "that in your books you describe stately mansions and ancestral halls, but when you build you put up a little house like this?"

"Well," Mrs. Maugham explained, "it's because words are cheaper than bricks, you know."

GEORGETTE ROBE

A robe of delicate pink georgette is hand-made and embroidered in a design of pink beads and hand stitching. It would be a simple matter to make it up into a most distinctive frock.

DRESSES MATCH COATS

Pleated dresses of crepe are matched by long coats of wool, the color of the dress.

NEW FROCKS

In some of the newest frocks circular godet pleats are inserted at each side of the skirt.

BABSON'S LETTER

ARMOUR CONVERTED

Babson Institute Issues a Remarkable Statement on the Capital and Labor Question by J. Orden Armour

WELLESLEY HILLS, Mass., Sept. 19.—J. Ogden Armour has been looked upon as a great capitalist incapable of seeing the side of either the wage worker or the public. Today, however, he has outwitted his criticism by coming out frankly for both the organizing of wage workers and the protection of the public. Mr. Armour begins his discussion by saying that the problem of the employer and the wage worker is not primarily to divide profits but to assure them. "For certainly they must be made before they can be divided. Dividing them," says Mr. Armour, "is a mighty easy job alongside of making them." In discussing the recent strikes Mr. Armour says, "Strikes or lockouts merely show which factor for the moment is most powerful and not in any sense determines what is right. It is the strongest side which wins and this is not necessarily the side which should."

His complete statement as just issued at the recent conference on public relations at the Babson institute is as follows:

"Efforts to take labor or capital out of the list of commodities subject to the law of supply and demand are responsible for what is generally called the struggle between capital and labor, or, more properly speaking, the struggle between employers and wage workers. Always in the past a surplus of workers has meant lower wages. Those with labor to sell have said that capital was cracking the whip, while employers pointed to increased competition and lower selling prices as both justifying and compelling lower operating costs.

"On the other hand, when workers are scarce, wages go up. Then those with capital invested have maintained that the wage workers take advantage of the situation. The wage workers' reply is that higher living costs justify higher wages. Thus it will be seen that while there isn't any question but that wages go up and down in accordance with the law of supply and demand, there are two different explanations for the phenomenon. Either is reasonable or unreasonable, according to one's own viewpoint.

Readjustment Brings Strife

"There are at this writing more than the usual evidences of the struggle between employers and wage workers. This is due to the fact that after a long period of increasing wages there came a turn in the tide which had been carrying wages and prices to higher and higher levels. With the end of the period of war inflation came an insistent demand for readjustment. Just what readjustment means depends largely upon who defines it. To employers it means a return to normal operating costs, etc., while to wage workers it means lower prices on the essentials of life.

"Inasmuch as about 90 per cent of the ultimate price of commodities in general represents the labor costs incident to production, manufacture, distribution, etc., it ought to be obvious that wages and prices are in the same boat and must float or sink together. Thus, when markets slumped and prices fell, wages were started on the down trend and thereupon workers in many industries fell back upon the strike as a weapon against wage reductions.

Economic Laws Inexorable

"The law of supply and demand calls for a return to normalcy, and wage workers, while aiming blows at employers, are really bucking up against inexorable natural laws. These laws permitted high wages for workers and high interest rates for capital during the war period. Since then these laws have forced the interest rate down, and they will not permit the retention of war-time wages.

"It may be a hard pill for both capital and labor to swallow, but the fact remains that they are subject to the law of supply and demand and they cannot escape it. Regardless of outside interference, 'wage earner-employer' difficulties will always be settled in accordance with the requirements of natural laws and all the ills and hardships of the struggle between the two factions result from resistance of these laws.

"It seems to me that the time has come when we, as a nation, should take steps which will enable the natural laws to operate without the painful and damaging strugles which are now the rule, and which are not productive of permanent good to either employer or employe.

Panaceas Disregard Laws

"Panaceas for employer-wage worker ills have always been on the market but in practically all cases they have bene designed to produce some effect other than that which would come from the normal working out of the law of supply and demand. They have sought to keep wages up while cutting prices, or to force wages down while maintaining price levels, or have otherwise disregarded the normal and natural relations between wages and prices. Therefore, these panaceas have not worked and never will work. The sooner it is recognized that natural laws will prevail, the sooner will we find the solution for our troubles. The proper solution must bring the same result that the normal working of the law would bring, but must avoid the evils and ills and damages incident thereto.

Dividing the Profits

"The fight between employer and wage earner has been described as having to do with a division of the profits. If that were true, the problem would be much simpler than it really is. Division of the profits is merely a phase of the matter; the big problem is to make the profits in the first place. It is astounding ho much ignorance there is relative to the profits of business. The lay mind assumes that the margin between the original cost and the ultimate selling price is profit. The part that operating costs and overhead expenses play in wiping out this margin gets scant consideration.

"When a business pays a dollar for raw material and sells the finished product for $2, the layman says there is a dollar profit, but as often as not such a margin between cost and price means a loss. It may cost considerable to turn the raw product into the finished article since the labor involved and the equipment used may be a very big expense. On top of that there will be storage charges and freight bills and sales costs. There are a dozen charges that center in and conspire to wipe out the margin, and not the least of these is represented by the tax that the business pays.

"The sum total of all its operating and overhead charges may easily wipe out what appears to be a wide margin between raw product costs and finished article prices. Men work for a livelihood and capital works for interest, and there always will be room for difference of opinion as to what constitutes a good livelihood and a good interest, but there need be no question about this fact—neither men nor money will work without a return. THE PROBLEM OF WAGE EARNER AND EMPLOYER THEN, IS NOT TO DIVIDE PROFITS, BUT TO ASSURE PROFITS, FOR CERTAINLY THEY MUST BE MADE BEFORE THEY CAN BE DIVIDED. DIVIDING THEM IS A MIGHTY EASY JOB ALONGSIDE OF MAKING THEM.

Reasonable Men Agree

"Everybody has a right to opinions as to the cure for industrial ills and the business with which I am connected is now engaged in trying out a plan which holds forth great promise. It is not designed to bring about the millenium; neither does it promise to give workers high wages and employers high profits. It is founded on knowledge that the business must prosper if either employe or employer is to prosper. With the two factors working together with mutual understanding and recognition of the problems confronting the industry, the results of the law of supply and demand can be attained without injury to either factor and with consequent benefit to both.

"This is being accomplished with us by the workers organizing into what resembles political constituencies, they electing their represenatives to minor and major conference boards. The minor boards consider matters of purely local and departmental interest, while the major boards broaden the scope of their interests u pto the point where the general conference board sits in judgment on problems affecting the entire organization. The conference boards are made up of equal numbers of representatives of employes and of the management, and all their decisions call for agreements between the two factions. The plan assumes that reasonable men who are acquainted with all the facts about a matter will reach an agreement when they place their feet under the same table and give honest consideration to the problem before them. On the outside chance that some situation may arise in which the two factions cannot agree after such honest and careful consideration, provision is made for arbitration, but it is not expected that this will be necessary.

Union Ideals All Right

"It takes a very narrow-minded person to believe that the announced names of unionism are other than right and just, but there is also the certainty that in practice the relations between unions and employers will be tests of strength. A strike or a lockout merely shows which factor is for the moment dominant, and in no sense determines what is right or what is best for the business—and when I say best for the business I mean best for those who are investing their labor as well as those who are investing their capital.

"We do not expect this plan to accomplish the impossible, but do believe that when reasonable men get together to discuss and consider mutual problems, a solution can be found which will obviate tests of strength, such as the strike and the lockout.

Public Rights Paramount

"Under existing conditions, 95 percent of the people are made to suffer mentally, physically and financially, when 5 percent engage in industrial dispute. Everyone agrees that the whole public ought not be made to suffer by reason of "wage earner-employer" disputes. But as long as certain rights now recognized as inalienable continue to be so recognized, the public will remain the innocent bystander who gets the most of the bricks. Wage earners say they have a right to refuse work; employers claim the same right. Wage workers say they have a right to fight for what is due them; employers make a similar claim. I appreciate the danger of advocating the abrogation of any rights, but it does seem that the public too has some rights, and that its rights have precedence over the rights of any minor factions, be they workers or employers or stockholders.

Arbitration Should Be Compulsory

"I am a firm believer in the fact that men in the main are reasonable and that when they understand what is the requirement of economic law they will find a way to adjust themselves to it, but if they fail to do so and if their failure is detrimental to public interest, then there ought to be means for forcing settlement through compulsory arbitration. I am, today, an advocate of compulsory arbitration as a means for ending "employer-wage worker" disputes which cannot be ended by mutual agreement.

"I state to the Babson Institute that there should be a tribunal of such character that its integrity and fairness is beyond question. Upon that tribunal should rest responsibility for settling difficulties when direct negotiations fail. The tribunal should have ample powers to compel submission of disputes to it and to enforce its findings. Only in that way can the interests of the great majority be safeguarded. Strife between employers and wage workers, based on misunderstanding of economic laws, must be brought to an end."

USE FOR LARGE BAGS

A large paper grocery bag comes in very handy when emptying your electric cleaner. Insert the mouth of the dustbag well inside of the paper bag and shake thoroughly. This method will prevent the dirt from scottering.

RAG DOLLS

Rag dolls have a charm for very small children that no other doll possesses, and a limp doll that can be washed and ironed and still retain its identity will be welcomed by the modern mother. These dolls come ready to put together.

NEW COATS

Chenille handwork is employed with effective results on some of the new coats.

TO SELL TWO-THIRDS OF TOBACCO CROP

R. R. Patterson, J. C. Stone & Joseph W. Alsap.

These three men have been selected by 150,000 tobacco growers in nine states to handle the sale of 450,000 to 500,000 pounds of American-grown tobacco, worth more than $100,000,000, which will be marked cooperatively through their three organizations. R. R. Patterson is manager of the leaf department of the Tobacco Growers' Cooperative association of Virginia, North and South Carolina; J. C. Stone is president and general manager of the Burley Tobacco Growers of Kentucky, Tennessee, Indiana and Ohio, while Joseph W. Alsap is chairman of the executive committee of the Connecticut Valley Tobacco association.

FANCY BUCKLES AGAIN ADORN DRESS PUMPS

Higher heels, pumps adorned with ornamental buckles of rhinestones, cut steel or bronze, and mostly square in shape, flaring tongues and strap trims, mark the new, smart models in footwear. The branching front strap is one of the chief novelties of the season.

Some dressmakers are predicting a great revival of monkey fur and long-haired lynx as trimming for dress coats.

Handbags and envelopes grow smaller each season. They must carry out the color note of the costume without being too evident an accessory.

Velvet is the most distinguishing item of the fall fabrics being used for hats, costume suits, gowns and wraps in a great variety of colors.

Frank Borzage, the celebrated director of Cosmopolitan Productions, went with his entire company to the Canadian Rockies, where he filmed James Oliver Curwood's famous story, "The Valley of Silent Men," amid the scenes which the author described so vividly in his novel.

Unless studio reports and the evidence of many beautiful photographs on location are misleading, Mr. Borzage has not only "nature illustrated" Mr. Curwood's thrilling romance of the Great White North, but has scored another Cosmopolitan success, comparable with his "Humoresque."

Of course, this romance of the northern wilds which comes to the T. D. & L. theater today, is a striking contrast to the crowded East Side, the bright light of Broadway shown in "Back Pay," or the humors of "Get-Rich-Quick-Wallingford," which Mr. Borzage also made for Cosmopolitan Productions. But the same meticulous attention to detail and broad grasp of his subject which characterized Mr. Borzage's work in the big city studio,

SECURITY HOUSING CORPORATION HERE TO HELP CITY

With Glendale's population increasing at a rate that will call for a building program of approximately $6,000,000 for the current year, the need of a free supply of money to finance this big undertaking is generally understood, according to Charles B. Hopper, vice-president of the Security Housing Corporation, who says that there should be no lack of funds to carry into effect Glendale's needs. This $2,000,000 company was organized a few months ago by prominent Southern California business men expressly for the purpose of aiding persons of moderate means to build their own homes.

"It has become plainly evident that Glendale's future is assured," said Mr. Hopper. "A community that has grown from a population of less than 3,000 only 12 years ago to approximately 32,000—which can find the funds to build a million-dollar school and to undertake many other large civic enterprises—has established itself in a leading place among the progressive communities of the southland. And for the same reason that capital can be found for public enterprises, so it should be equally available for home-builders.

"The need for an organization of the character of the Security Housing Corporation became evident about a year ago to a group of men whose activities were largely along financial and real estate lines. Through years of practical experience they had come to know all the problems that pertain to the financing, planning and construction of homes. They saw that there was a large body of wage-earners and others of moderate means who were eager to have their own homes, but were unable to accumulate the necessary funds with which to build them. These men determined that the time was opportune to help these aspiring citizens, and so the Security plan was brought into being.

There are three outstanding elements that enter into the construction of a home; cost of materials, cost of labor, and cost of financing. In all these costs, material savings can be effected by an expert understanding of the conditions governing them. Under the Security plan, experts in each of these three divisions are employed to make sure that the prospective home-owner gets the benefit of every possible economy that can be practiced.

"Few persons who have not built a home are aware of the many pitfalls that lie in the pathway of the one who builds for the first time. There are matters of employers' liability, insurance, of guarding against mechanics liens, of properly filing plans, of obtaining release and receipts from sub-contractors, material houses, etc., so the property can be properly cleared. There are many legal considerations involved, considerations of title and so forth, to be taken care of. The unaccustomed builder learns of these only by hard experience and frequently at a very high cost to himself. It was the thought of those who organized the Security Housing Corporation that all these things could be done for the prospective home owner so that he could go about his usual business while the home was being prepared for him.

"We of the Security Housing Corporation believe in Glendale and so stand ready to do our part in its upbuilding. We will lend any responsible person, who wants to build his own home, up to 70 per cent of its total cost, and will render every possible assistance in all the many little troubles unavoidably associated with home-building."

The Security Housing officers are all men of standing. They include Harold H. Braly, president, also president of the California Finance company; Charles B. Hopper, vice-president, director of the Los Angeles Realty Board; Arthur H. Braly, treasurer, formerly president of California Savings and Commercial bank, now president of Angelus Building and Investment company; George G. Griffin, secretary, formerly secretary of Goodyear Tire and Rubber company, and of California-Pacific Cotton Mills Co.; J. A. Jevne, director, vice-president and general manager H. Jevne & Co.; T. W. Hendrick, director, connected with investment department, Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Co., and Harry M. Haldeman, director, president of All-Year Club, Los Angeles, and Pacific Pipe and Supply company. The Security Trust and Savings Bank of Los Angeles, is the depository trustee. The Glendale offices of the Security Housing Corporation are located at 130 South Brand boulevard.

Autos Replace Dobbin Even in Gypsy Caravans

The auto has replaced the horse—even in gypsy caravans.

A few years ago, several wagon loads of gypsies traveling over the country was a usual sight.

They still travel over the country these days, but they use autos for traveling purposes.

Seven machines loaded with wanderers and their camping outfits, halted in Burbank for several hours Wednesday morning.

Several gypsies have been passing through Burbank recently, but Wednesday's delegation was the largest of the "season."

Busy Housewife Should Consider Problems of Chef on the Big Liner

Wee Travellers Visit the Chef's Domain

New York Housewives who are at their wits' end to plan a variety of meals for a week for the average sized family will be interested in a recent survey made of the cuisine service of the United States Lines. It developed that 117,000 meals are served on a voyage by each of the bigger liners of the fleet, the voyage being the time consumed by the vessel from the time of its departure from New York for Europe and return to the home port.

Mistress Housewife who is worried by the planning of meals for the little family would do well to think of the problems that confront the chief steward and the chef on an ocean liner. The survey of the cuisine situation developed the fact that some 4,170 meals a day are served aboard ship. There are six services in the course of the day as follows: coffee, 6:00 A. M.; breakfast, 8:00 to 10:00 A. M.; bullion and sandwiches, 11 to 12; luncheon, 1:00 to 2:00 P. M.; tea, 3:00 to 5:00 P. M.; dinner, 6:00 to 8:00 P. M., and buffet service, 9:30 to 10:30 P. M.

In the survey made of the steward's departments of the various vessels of the United States Lines fleet the fact was developed that Americans as a race are heavy eaters. Furthermore they eat much more rapidly than the European. Your European makes almost a rite of his meals. The American regards it as a task to be performed as rapidly as possible.

The chef on the liner must not only oversee the preparations of all the regular meals and luncheons, but must prepare special services. Invalids, for instance, must have specially prepared dishes and no matter what their desires may be they are supplied from the ample larders aboard the ships. Birthdays and other anniversaries call for service on the part of the ship's chef. Furthermore the chef must consider the tastes of many nationalities. He must study the passenger list and where he finds that there are a large number of English, American, French, German, or other nationals on board, he must create dishes with which they are familiar. The chef is ever on the job and during the trip hardly gets time to sleep.

There is keen competition among the chief stewards and chefs on the vessels of the United States Lines and whenever one creates a new dish that makes an appeal to the travelling public, the news spreads and new dishes begin to make their appearance on other ships. The chefs are all men who have had long training in big hotels ashore and on ships at sea.

In advance of a trip the chief steward and the chef must carefully calculate the amount of provisions necessary for the voyage. Aboard the vessels of the United States Lines it is estimated that each passenger consumes from one pound to one pound and one-half of potatoes a day. Americans, it might be stated, are great potato eaters. In the matter of roasts six ounces per person per day are allowed. Steaks and chops are estimated at one-half pound per person on individual orders. Game and poultry amounts to one pound per person. As an idea of the amount of food carried aboard a ship it might be stated that in provisioning the Stea. ship George Washington recently 6,500 pounds of poultry and game were placed on board. In the matter of potatoes there were 30,000 pounds and other vegetables amounting to 10,500 pounds. Of milk there were 25,000 quarts, supplemented by 500 quarts of cream. There were 14 kinds of cheese with a total weight of 900 pounds and of tea and coffee 8,000 pounds.

In feeding the passengers aboard a large liner the task of the chef is equal to that of a man seeking to provide food for a small city.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 22.—When members of the Investment Bankers' Association of America reach California October 3, on their five special trains, en route to their eleventh annual convention to be held at Del Monte, their California hosts will not only be on hand to welcome them to the state, but they will be ready to show California to the visitors. On a carefully planned itinerary of side trips from Sacramento, Fresno, Los Angeles, Santa Barbara, Del Monte, and San Francisco, they will see a panorama of California mountain, valley and ocean rim, a true cross-section of the best development of the state's natural resources.

Primarily the trip has been planned by the California convention committee to give the men who handle annually a billion and a half dollars in investment securities an opportunity to see and study the accomplishments of large capital enterprises which the sale of bond issues has made possible.

The members hosts will be: Anglo & London Paris National bank, Aronson & Company, Bank of California, N. A., Bank of Italy, Banks, Huntley & Co., J. Barth & Co., Bayly Brothers, A. G. Becker & Co., Blair & Co., Inc., Blyth, Witter & Co., Bond, Goodwin & Tucker, Inc., Bradford, Kimball & Co., F. M. Brown & Co., George H. Burr & Co., California Bank, California company, Carstens & Earles, Inc., Wm. Cavalier & Co., Drake, Riley & Thomas, First Securities Co., Freeman, Smith & Camp Co., Frick, Martin & Co., Guaranty Trust & Savings Bank, Hunter, Dulin & Co., M. H. Lewis & Co., McDonnell & Co., Mercantile Trust Co., Merrill, Lynch & Co., G. E. Miller & Co., R. H. Moulton & Co., National City Company of California, Cyrus Peirce & Co., Howard G. Rath Co., E. H. Rollins & Sons, Ryone & Co., Schwabacher & Co., Security Trust & Savings Bank, Shingle, Brown & Co., Wm. R. Staats Co., Stephens & Company, Stevens, Page & Sterling, Strassburger & Co., Sutro & Co., Ernest S. Tanner & Co.

During the sessions of the convention there will be special entertainment for ladies accompanying members of the association, a special committee of which Mrs. James Jenkins is chairman, having been appointed for the purpose. Their program while in San Francisco provides for a visit to Muir Woods and a trip to the top of Mount Tamalpais.

Altogether the members of the California group of the organization propose to give the distinguished visitors a picture of California's wonderland and a first-hand insight into the state's potentialities for development that will be reflected in an even wider market for California's sound investment securities than that they now command.

Preparations for the 10-day stay of the easterners within the state are in the hands of the following committees, the chairman of each being indicated: Executive, B. H. Dibblee, of E. H. Rollins & Sons; convention, Syrus Peirce, of Cyrus Peirce & Co.; entertainment, LeRoy T. Ryone, of Ryone & Co.; publicity, Guy R. Kinsley, of Cyrus Peirce & Co.; finance, Charles R. Blyth, of Blyth, Witter & Co.; golf, Robert E. Hunter, of Hunter, Dulin & Co.; hunting and fishing, H. H. Fair, of Cyrus Peirce & Co.; reception, James Jenkins, of E. H. After all sorts of hints, Johnny succeeded in getting a dime from his mother but he failed to thank her for it. Whereupon the mother, ashamed of her child's rudeness, remonstrated:

"Johnny, you are awfully forgetful. What should you say when you get something?"

"I can't tell," was Johnny's only reply.

"You can't tell? Why, Johnny, it's awful! What does mamma say when papa gives her money?"

"'Is that all?'"

Let a Bank Book Shelter You from Life's Troubles

You wouldn't sympathize much with a man whose house was flooded by rain and storm because he didn't put a roof over it. Yet many people neglect to build a shelter against the storms and misfortunes of life when they know the surest of all shelters is a Savings Account.

If you should be thrown out of work, have sickness in the family, or suffer any other misfortune, your bank book will prove your best friend in time of trial. And a Bank Account can prove mighty helpful when the one great opportunity of your lifetime comes. You know how hard it would be to let it pass because you lacked a little capital!

The sooner you start saving, the sooner you'll be prepared to meet squarely anything that may come your way.

The right kind of pride,

it's developed when you own your home.

There are different kinds of pride. There is the arrogance and superciliousness of the upstart. There is the lordly attitude of the one who can point back to a long line fo prominent ancestors. But there is one kind of pride which is welcome in all circles—that which comes with Home Ownership.

Immediately you seek to put your belongings in the most comfortable and attractive condition. Instead of living from hand to mouth, you see monthly and yearly your condition improve because of the investment in your home—of time, labor and cash. And it's all worth while.

Our place is to help you find a plan which is pleasing to you—we have literally thousands of them at your disposal. And then we are prepared to assist you in securing worth-while materials and will direct you so that your money will go the farthest in securing a legitimate return.

Don't hesitate to call on us and claim our services. We can make it worth while to you, and if you need a reasonable loan in order to build, we may be able to assist you in arranging that, also. Let us hear from you.

WANTS SHARE OF $40,000,000 REAM ESTATE

Mrs. Frank M. Downer, Jr., formerly Miss Lenora Ream, beautiful niece of the late Norman B. Ream, has entered suit in Chicago for a $100,000 share of his $40,000,000 estate. When his younger brother, John, found himself in financial difficulties. Norman Ream took the two younger boys and Lenora to raise. She was placed in care of Mrs. Heddlee in Osceola. When she was 19 she lost a hand in an accident on the C., B. & Q. railroad, in which Ream was one of the principal stockholders. That suit was settled for $2500, with the understanding, she alleges, that Ream would take care of her for the rest of her life and provide for her in his will. Ream died two years after her marriage to Downer, and the provisions of the will were said to have been so disappointing that Downer left her.

LITTLENESS VS. BIGNESS

By H. ADDINGTON BRUCE

Author of "The Riddle of Personality," "Self-Development," Etc.

(Copyright, 1922, by The Associated Newspapers.)

It is a sure sign of littleness in a man to hear him continually talking of the wonderful things he has done.

Those who do really wonderful things feel under no necessity of telling other people about them. They are content to let their record speak for itself.

Indeed, in most cases, they are too busy planning future achievements to dwell on their successes of the past. The truly great are always forward-looking.

Also they are always open-minded, receptive to helpful suggestions, willing to acknowledge any mistakes they may make, and quick to profit from them.

Little men are conspicuously different in all these respects.

They go through life more or less mentally blind. Having assimilated a certain amount of knowledge, they seem to think there is nothing more for them to learn.

Certainly they do not learn anything from their mistakes, if only for the reason that they are unwilling to admit even to themselves that they make mistakes. If the mistakes they do make are pointed out to them they become resentful and irritated.

Inability to stand criticism is, in fact, an outstanding sign of littleness. So is overreadiness with excuses. So, too, is eagerness to attempt to fasten on somebody else the blame for one's own mistakes.

And you may be sure that a man is exceedingly little if his conversation has to do frequently with the faults and shortcomings of other people.

The man of large calibre is not merely too generous-minded to be addicted to slander and gossip. He is too much occupied with the problem of living life successfully himself, too appreciative of its difficulties, to waste time and energy in sneering at unfortunates.

For the same reasons, the large-calibred do not nag and bully other people. When you meet a man who does nag and bully you will make no mistake in labeling him "little."

The same label you may justly apply to those who take overseriously their recreations, their personal appearance, and their material comforts.

It is a good thing, a necessary thing, to have recreations. But only the little permit recreation to become a semi-obsession with them, so that achievement in play seems to them of more vital concern than achievement in solid, creative work.

Likewise, while it is of real importance to give some thought to one's appearance, personal appearance is a matter of infinitely less importance than many other things. Littleness is prone to overlook this.

There are many, many other signs of littleness. But these are the signs perhaps most commonly encountered. It is well to be aware of them, especially as an aid in knowing one's self.

For, unlike physical littleness, mental and moral littleness may be replaced by greatness. Never, however, can they be replaced until a man recognizes the defects which he should make special efforts to overcome.

FREE EXPLOSIVES FOR ALL FARMERS

Surplus War Stock to Be Distributed Through Colleges

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 19.—More than 4,000,000 pounds of picric acid, prepared in cartridge form, for blasting purposes, had been distributed by the bureau of public roads, U. S. department of agriculture, to farmers in many states in every section of the country up to September 1 last. This explosive is part of millions of pounds of picric acid left over from the war, and is being distributed to farmers throughout the country by the federal government at a nominal charge of seven cents a pound, which expense is solely for the purpose of covering the cost of drying, cartridging and distribution. Freight charges, however, are added.

Uncle Sam is giving away this material to farmers under an act of congress. All the farmers pay is the small charge above noted. Stump blasting and rock blasting will be much cheaper to the farmer, as a consequence. Farmers should place their orders quicly, as the supply will not last forever. In order to obtain a necessary quantity of picric acid cartridges, farmers are advised by the bureau of public roads to make application to the extension service of their state agricultural college. Farmers will be supplied either through the activities of the college or its extension service, or they will be advised what steps to take to obtain the necessary supplies if they write to the drainage division, bureau of public roads, Washington, D. C.

Among the states which received this explosive up to September 1 is California, 72,400 pounds.

From Wisconsin a farmer at Irma reports: "Picric acid is better than twice the same number of sticks of 40 per cent dynamite." From another at Gleason, Wis., comes the report: "Three sticks of picric acid will do more work than four sticks of 40 per cent dynamite." By telegraph from a county agent in Minnesota comes the report: "Picric acid explosive giving excellent satisfaction. Farmers report does work of 60 per cent dynamite on stumping and rock blasting. Demand much greater than our county allotment. Picric a boon to our farmers, mainly of limited means, who are struggling to clear up farms."

All reports on the use of picric acid as an explosive received by the bureau of public roads from county agents and others throughout the country highly praise its use in the removal of stumps from farm lands and for other blasting purposes. It is stated unreservedly in these reports that picric acid has proven to be a far better and more efficient explosive for blasting purposes than dynamite.

Picric acid is a comparatively safe high explosive and farmers who avail themselves of the privilege offered by the government to obtain it for blasting purposes will find it is more insensitive to shock or impact and to friction than are the commercial explosives. It is difficult to ignite; and it will burn, at least in small quantities, without exploding. It has been prepared for distribution in cartridges weighing about six ounces, this amount being approximately equal in strength to an eight-ounce cartridge of commercial dynamite used for similar purposes. In recent government tests it has been proven that picric acid keeps indefinitely and is not affected by either heat or cold.

LITTLE TALKS ON THRIFT

By S. W. STRAUS, President American Society for Thrift.

S. W. STRAUS

"THE time is never lost that is devoted to work," wrote Emerson. Work and thrift are two of the chief essentials of progress, but it is just as necessary that we use judgment and care in our work as it is that we work at all. The term "hard work" is often applied as one of the needful qualities of individual success, but "intelligent work" more aptly describes the processes that bring upbuilding. While it is ture that those who get on best in the world are hard workers, they do so because they plan their work so that every moment will count for the most. There are those who literally work themselves to death, and yet accomplish but little in the way of advancement.

Let us understand that it is the part of thrift to do our work intelligently. It is thrifty to study each detail connected with our daily duties and in this way find out if we are wasting time and energy.

No matter how menial our tasks, we should not become mere automatons. It should be our constant endeavor to find means, if possible, for doing our work more efficiently. If it were not for the fact that thoughtful men have constantly sought to improve methods of work we would not have the marvelous gifts of science and invention that have become necessities of our daily lives.

Try to do your work better and more efficiently. This is true thrift. It will bring results in your development and progress.

THE REFERENDUM

(EDITOR'S NOTE:—This column will be devoted to signed propaganda relating to the various measures on the state ballot in November and other matter of like nature. Responsibility for statements herein lies with the authors whose names are signed. The space is limited.)

Believing that a large majority of the members of the medical and dental professions heartily concur in the enclosed opinion and sentiment expressed by our first surgeon general, we are sending you this letter and leaflets to give you first hand information concerning initiative number "20."

The "Osteopathic act" does not change the medical law. It changes only the administration of the law. It provides that a self-sustaining board of osteopathic examiners, selected by the governor, shall administer the existing law and future laws that the legislature may enact regulating osteopathic colleges and graduates.

The present high educational standards required by California for all physician and surgeon colleges and graduates are not changed. The enclosed leaflets show that Judge Wellborn found that our college more than meets these standards.

Our college teaches the four thousand hour curriculum required by law of all physician and surgeon colleges. This is the standard curriculum of the Association of American Medical Colleges. In addition to this curriculum—not in lieu of it, but on top of it—our college teaches osteopathy. The records of department of the superior court of Los Angeles county contain the proof of this fact.

The fact that since 1907, osteopathic graduates have pased exactly the same state examination for licenses to practice that all other physicians and surgeons have taken, is convincing proof; and the "Findings of Facts" by California's courts, is conclusive proof of the quality and comprehensiveness of osteopathic education.

This act does not in any way affect or change the licenses of the osteopaths now practicing in California; nor does it in any particular alter the power and jurisdiction of the state board of health.

We will gladly answer any question or furnish to you any additional information that you may desire.

Yours with respect,
HARRY W. FORBES, D. O.,
President.
California Osteopathic Association.

ACTION DE LUX AT GLENDALE THEATRE

Action drama deluxe may be found at the Glendale theater this week, where Benjamin B. Hampton's latest photoplay, "When Romance Rides," released by Goldwyn, is being shown. The picture was suggested by the Zane Grey novel, "Wildfire," which has had millions of readers.

"When Romance Rides" has as its featured players, Claire Adams and Carl Gantvoort, who have won many admirers through their sterling dramatic work in other Hampton successes.

There are punches galore in the picture that keep even the most blase theater goers on the edge of their chairs. There is a thrilling horse race and battle royal between the heroine and a renegade half-wit, following which she is tied to the back of a wild horse and saved only by the hero "bull-dogging" the steed just as it is about to plunge recklessly over a precipice.

Dog and horse lovers will find much to please them in "When Romance Rides" for a clever Belgian police dog has an important canine part, while almost every type of horse has a part in the picture, from the smallest horse in the world, who is not a pony, but in reality a dwarf stallion, to the wild horse, Wildfire, who wins the famous race.

"When Romance Rides" offers absorbing entertainment to photoplay patrons, with not an incident that could offend the most fastidious.

HUNTERS AND FIRES MENACE FORESTS

By CHARLES H. SHINN

Modern science has made many revealing studies of human nature and one of them stresses the evils of over-excitement. When a man loves hunting so much that he spends hours in making ready and hikes for the mountains so as to get the first shot of the season, he is apt to neglect the responsibilities in every other direction. Therefore, the "graphs" which show the curves of increase in fires in our national forests always exhibit a frightful rise during the first week of each hunting season.

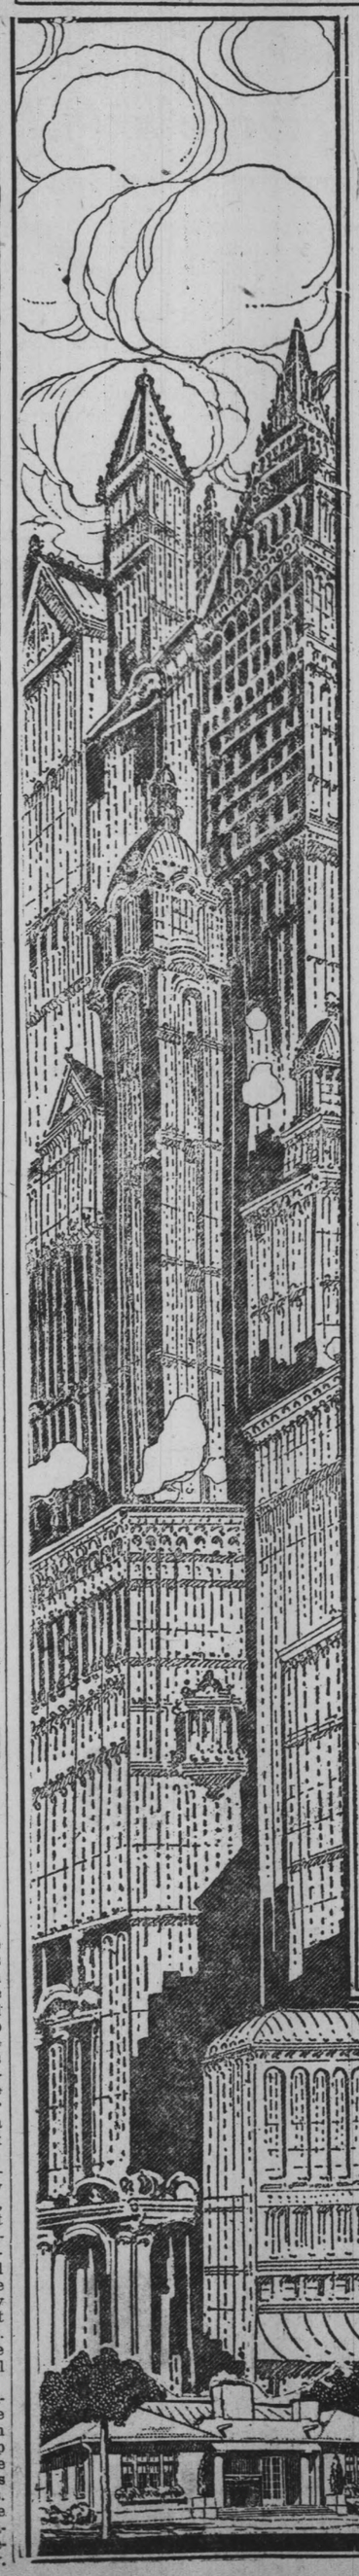
The weather is warm, the grass-cover is very dry, there is plenty of wind, and soon lightning storms, the first week in September, but above and beyond all those factors we must reckon with the hunting fever of thousands of excited men who can think of only one thing at a time. What they really need is more education in forest wisdom and more self-discipline. All this comes right back to the homes, the schools and the social standards of each community.

The excited "first crop" of hunters must take most of the blame for the sudden September rise in fire-losses. Some of them tramp all day, make hasty camps, are tired and so are careless. Others drop matches and cigarette stubs. But underlying such things as these are city upbringings, short vacations, ignorance, laziness, excitement and plain don't-care-anyhow.

ALL TOGETHER! LET'S BOOST THE ELECTRIC LINE

LET'S BUILD UP OUR TOWN

Help Make This a Brighter and Better Place to Live in.



THE NEW ELECTRIC LINE WILL DO IT!

THE greatest opportunity for building and beautifying our homes and our city now presents itself to the people of GLENDALE.

Opportunity has come, and has brought with it reduced prices on lumber, brick, cement, structural iron, paint, plumbing supplies, electrical fixtures, home furnishings. Not for years have prices on these commodities and on all labor been as low as they are to-day.

Any building project, whether it be a house, apartment or business block, can be built better, cheaper and quicker Now. And there is no better time than the present for furnishing and decorating.

Glendale's Greatest Opportunity is Now Here

The building of the new electric line will do more to forward the progress of Glendale than anything that could be done for many times the amount of money expended. By spending $25,000 Glendale will make $25,000 a year, to say nothing of the great development that the new electric line will bring to Glendale in the way of new homes, more people and building development on the East Side and through to the City Park.

ONLY A FEW THOUSAND DOLLARS MORE IS REQUIRED TO PUT THE ELECTRIC LINE OVER—LET'S GO DOWN IN OUR POCKET AND RAISE THE MONEY. NO SIMILAR AMOUNT OF MONEY WILL DO WHAT THE ELECTRIC ROAD WILL BRING IN THE WAY OF MAKING

All together, now, and pull for the New Electric Railway. Glendale must have it—we cannot afford to let the opportunity slip.

DIPLOMACY BY CASE LOTS IS VOGUE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—When the diplomatic representatives of the newly recognized countries of Esthonia, Lithuania, and Lativia arrive in Washington in the near future, they will find a warm welcome, not only from government officials, but from those who like their "diplomacy" in case lots.

The 47 diplomats in this city smile when they think of what the new envoys are up against.

One of the chief indoor sports of the nation's capital for three years past has been "Let's go see Ambassador So-and-So or Mister Blank." The ambassador's didn't mind so long as diplomacy flowed onup from a bottle.

But when the veterans at the game learned that Scotch is laid down at the embassy's door from London at $13 a case and gin at a trifle over $15, not to speak of other nectars, the demand became for "diplomacy by the case."

From then on, the "career" here became an appalling nightmare to these harrassed diplomats. Wits have been worked overtime to devise excuses from importunate demands. Diplomats from the nature of things are obliging persons, but such demands laid them open to harsh criticism as "bootleggers" by Uncle Sam, if acceeded to.

Little by little, however, they have gotten from under and the voracious seekers of cases are finding the game harder to work.

So these wise men who have been through the mill, shake their heads and smile when they think of what awaits these bright new envoys.

THE ONCE OVER

Boots the Bootlegger

"This here bootlegging business is in need of reforming," said Botts the Bootlegger, as he put his sample case down beside a policeman and asked him to mind it for him.

"Reform?" we asked.

"Yeah," said Botts. "What the bootlegging business needs in it today is more gentlemen of standing."

"Gentlemen?" we repeated.

"Yeah, gentlemen. . . .men of the highest character, good citizens, men that count in the community . . . honest men, that's what," continued Botts. "We gotta get together and weed out the lawbreakers."

"he what?"

"Lawbreakers!" repeated Botts. "The trouble with the bootlegging business is that so many men in it are unprincipled fellows without a proper appreciation of their olbigations to the public. They have no high sense of public service, no ideals, no moral worth."

We didn't quite follow Botts, but he continued:

"There's no class to the business now. Anybody can get in. If there's any business in America that needs men of integrity it's the bootlegging business. You can't run any business unless honesty and square dealing are at the bottom of it. If I had my way I wouldn't let anybody enter the bootlegging profession unless he had a reputation as a high-grade man and could furnish the best of character witnesses.

"Liquor today is full of rank impurities, ain't it? It's the most adulterated product in the world. What a man wants to know is whether he's getting real, honest-to-goodness stuff or poison. It is the right of every citizen to walk up to a bootlegger today, look him in the eye, order a quart of pure liquor, and GET IT. But it's impossible under the present conditions. Allota unscrupulous guys are turning out bum stuff and putting fake labels on the bottles and then charging exorbitant prices. They're killing the business."

We began to follow his logic.

"What we bootleggers gotta do is to get together and convince the public we're honest, reliable business men, entitled to the respect and confidence of the community.

"I think any time one bootlegger finds another selling bum stuff he should notify the prohibition officials and have him arrested!

"The government should do sumpin about the overcharging, too. I don't see why congress doesn't investigate and fix a law that $8 a quart is enough for a quart of any rye or Scotch. What's the matter with the Washington authorities? They don't seem to take any interest in the liquor situation."

"The situation is very discouraging," we admitted.

"Discouraging!" exclaimed Botts the Bootlegger. "It's worse. The bootleggers today are discrediting the business, that's what! I dunno but what the bootlegging industry needs a general director, an overlord or czar, just like they have in the movies and in baseball. We need a Judge Landis to direct the business and weed out the undesirables.

"On the level, unless bootlegging is put on a high plane, the first thing you know it'll force prohibition in this country," concluded Botts.

Foley's Friendly Fancies

JAMES W. FOLEY

APART

It seems so strange! But yesterday
He stopped and said me his good-day;
We walked and talked and dreamed and spent
A short half hour and then he went.
Today that friendship I would share,
But I am here and he is—where?

It seems so strange! I go my days
Through all the old, familiar ways.
The dawns are light, the dusks are dim
As yesterday they were for him,
But as they nevermore shall be—
And yet he walked and talked with me.

For he was life—the whole of it,
As something fixed and definite,
His hand so warm, his eyes alight,
Yet somehow, strangely, in the night,
I know not how or why, he kept
The faith of life with years, and slept.

What was it went and left it dull,
That eye alight and lustreful?
That hushed the kindly speech and stilled
The throbbing heart and strangely chilled
The warmth of cheek? What mystic hold
Was broken when that hand grew cold?

It seems so strange! But yesterday
He seemed as sure in life, I say,
As dawn or dusk or rain or sun
Or song or sky! What magic done
In that dark hour, what chill breath
Froze him in sleep,—left me alone?

FANNING WITH FARRELL

Dempsey and the Bright Lights

By HENRY L. FARRELL
United Press Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—Jack Dempsey's next big fight most probably will be with Harry Wills, his colored challenger.

Wills is the outstanding figure among the contenders for the heavyweight championship and only the race question has prevented him from getting his chance for the title.

In considering what chance Wills has to win the title, the physical condition of the champion is the most important matter.

Ring worms are now asking how Dempsey has been behaving himself since he knocked Carpentier out, what he did in Europe and what he is doing now in the line of dissipation.

It has been said and it has been printed that Dempsey has been going the way of the bright lights and that he is following the footsteps of former champions who knocked out themselves.

As far as the writer knows, Dempsey has not been misbehaving. In the first place, he doesn't look it and dissipation always shows in sagging lines fo the face and inflated muscles of the body.

Also it must be considered that Dempsey's reputation makes him a conspicuous figure wherever he moves. He hardly could be wild and keep it quiet very long.

A good instance of this fact is shown in the case of a man who holds the same position in baseball that Dempsey has in the ring.

Every move the star baseball player makes around New York in a spicy way is known the next day among the circles that have their ears to the ground for racy stories. No such yarns have been spilled about Dempsey.

Dempsey is seen around cabarets frequently in New York. He dances and stays up late. Taxi drivers, the best sources of scandal in the "Roaring Forties," say they have taken him from cabarets to his hotel at 3, 4 and 5 o'clock in the morning, but that he never showed signs of having anything to drink and that he was seldom in the company of the opposite sex. It will be recalled the comment that went around Europe over the champion's small thirst for wines.

* * * * * *

Jimmy DeForest, who trained Dempsey for all his big fights and who is one of the best authorities on condition in the world, says he does not believe Dempsey is dissipating.

"He never cared much for drinking, he smokes only occasionally and I know that he never was fond of fast living. I have known Dempsey for years, better perhaps than any other person, and I do not believe he will fall for any kinds of abuse. His only danger is from inactivity. He has always led such a strenuous life that he blows up when he does not keep himself busy."

* * * * * *

While he may have trouble in training back into the same fine condition of 1919 in Toledo and 1921 in Jersey City, Dempsey will not be bothered with that jinx of other fights—making weight. He can step into the ring at any weight he desires.

Benny Leonard is the most outstanding example today of the weight problem. Many wise ring followers believe that Leonard is through as a lightweight and that he will lose the next time he has to meet a first class opponent at 135 pounds.

* * * * * *

The question is often asked if Leonard can make the lightweight limit, why doesn't he jump into the welterweight class?

The answer is simple. Leonard is first and last a business man and there isn't a nickle in the welterweight class, compared to what he can get as a slipping lightweight.

NEW RULES FOR LIQUOR TRANSFER

New rulings to govern the transfer of liquor in bond which were received from Washington yesterday by Collector of Internal Revenue Rex B. Goodcell throw more safeguards around California's liquor supply.

The regulations just issued follow the actions of the treasury department in deciding to concentrate the 42,000,000 gallons of hard liquor now stored in 300 warehouses scattered over the United States, into 14 storage places to be called Concentration Bonded Warehouses. One of these warehouses will be located in Los Angeles, and it is probable that 1,000,000 gallons of whiskey will be sent here.

Under the new regulations it will be the policy of the department that no application for transfer of liquor in bond to any distillery, general or special warehouse will be approved unless the warehouse has been designated as a Concentration Internal Revenue warehouse. Transfer of spirits in bond to bonded warehouses so designated will be made in the same manner as transfers in bond are now made. In cases where two or more distillery warehouses are owned by the same proprietor, spirits stored in them may be moved for concentration purposes from one warehouse to another with the consent of the commissioner.

Application for transfer must be accompanied by warehousing bond which must be filed with the collector. This bond may be filed by the distiller of record, the owner of the spirits or the proprietor of the concentration warehouse.

In addition to foregoing application on form 1410 revised must be filed by the proprietor of the concentration warehouse with the state prohibition director, who will follow the usual procedure regarding the issuance of permits to purchase liquor. This involves checking the application three ways.

Collector Goodcell pointed out that there will be some delay in installing the system due to the necessity of a complete technical qualification of some of the bonded warehouses designated as Centration Bonded Warehouses before they will be permitted to receive
